Russia Begins to Fear the Outcome of the Pressure Brought to Bear for Her Treatment of the Persecuted Jews.

London, Sept. 3.—A dispatch from Calcutta says a dangerous disposition has been manifesting itself among the native population since the failure of a jury to convict the editor of a native newspaper, Bangabasi, for the use of seditious language.

The age of consent law, interfering with Hindoo marriage customs, the Manipur incident and other matters have all tended to excite the people, and now that strongly seditious, if not treasonable language, has gone unpunished, there is a disposition to be bolder in utterance and menacing in tone.

The viceroy, Lord Lansdowne, is said to be much disquieted by the situation and the police have been instructed to be very vigilant in reporting for punishment all cases of incitement to disorder, as it is believed that treasonable tendency can only be repressed by making some examples.

Communications have passed between the English and Italian governments with a view to suppressing the importation of Italian children to London and other English cities for the purpose of begging.

The Italian government has a stringent law dealing with the matter, but the custom of importing these children continues, and they are usually sent on the streets in a pitiable condition with the object of exciting the pity of the spectators.

An Italian child nine years of age was arrested the other day in a London street, dragging a heavy barrel organ, and sent to the workhouse.

The police find it almost impossible to trace out the persons who send these children begging, as the latter are afraid or unwilling to tell. The authorities will probably take some steps to prevent the landing of pauper children.

A dispatch from Zanzibar that the sultan with some reluctance has handed over to the British details of civil and military administration. Heretofore, while acknowledging a British protectorate, he has been virtually independent as to the internal government of his state.

He has now placed the army and police under command of a British officer and appointed a British officer to organize the new harbor police and take charge of the lighthouses, the officers not be removed from their posts without the consent of the British agent and consul general. This leaves the sultan with symbols of sovereignty, merely a pensioned figurehead under Great Britain.

Constantinople advices state that one cause of the sultan's coolness toward England is the recent discovery by the Turkish authorities in Arabia that the rebels in Yemen are armed with rifles of the latest English make, imported to Yemen by the rebels. The sultan is said to be deeply affected by this evidence of England's violation of the laws of neutrality.

Duke Johann Albrecht, and the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, have arrived at Gelbensaude, where the grand duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, brother of the former, and brother-in-law of the latter, is dying. Yesterday the grand duke had increased difficulty in breathing, and the paralysis extended throughout the greater part of his body. It is believed that, in the event of death, the Duke Johann will be regent for the 9-year-old heir of the grand duchy.

The American copyright will be discussed at the international literary congress, to be held at Neufchatel, Switzerland, on the 26th of this month, and the copyright bill recently laid before the British parliament will also be a subject of addresses.

The Jews now being driven from Moscow are compelled to sign a paper to the effect that they are quitting the town of their own free will. This is done in order that the Russian authorities may be armed with an answer to the charges of brutality which, it appears, have made an impression even in Russia. The prevalent destitution, owing to the bad harvest, has made the lot of the Russian Jews more wretched than before, the starving peasantry seeking to wreak vengeance on the Jews for their own misery.

REUNION AT UPPER SANDUSKY.

Upper Sandusky, O., Sept. 3—Company K, Fifty-fifth regiment, O. V. V. I., held their annual reunion here to-day, in commemoration of the anniversary of the battle of Atlanta.

This company was organized here in the fall of 1860, and immediately went to the front.

They engaged in over thirty hotly contested battles, returning home July 20, 1865. The officers elected for the following year were J. F. Rieser, president; Wm. Fernbaugh, treasurer, and W. H. Cole, secretary. The next reunion will be held here June 8, 1892.

KILLED BY THE CARS.

Sad Accident on the Nypano Road.

A Human Foot Brought Into Dayton Gave the Clue to the Accident.

Dayton, O., Sept. 3.—When the New York, Pennsylvania, & Ohio train, due here at 1:25 this morning, pulled into the depot a human foot rolled out from beneath one of the coaches.

A search party started out and one mile away found the body of a man horribly mangled. A portion of the face was unmarred and showed that he wore a sandy colored beard and dark mustache.

He was attired only in a suit of underclothes and is supposed to be a somnambulist who fell from the train. He has not yet been identified.

ON A STRIKE AGAIN.

Workmen Out on a Branch of the L. E. & W.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 3.—The Lake Erie & Western strike has been renewed. On the Lafayette division traffic is again at a standstill. A few trains have been tied up on the Peru division but the majority of the freight trains are running. The Sandusky division is as yet unaffected.

The men stopped work because the new schedule was not satisfactory to them. General Manager Bradbury expressed himself as being much surprised when the men on the Peru division went out again. He says the men have submitted some new demands to him that were not mentioned in the basis of settlement just fixed upon. He is also inclined to the opinion that the strike is largely one of sympathy for the Lafayette division strikers.

FEDERATION BILL.

London, Sept. 3.—A dispatch from Victoria says that the Victorian legislature has passed the federation bill after adopting an amendment excluding New Zealand from the proposed federation.

The New South Wales legislature has by a vote of 61 to 47 rejected a motion in favor of the establishment of protective duties.

CROPS INJURED.

Edinburgh, Sept. 3.—Advices received from various parts of the country indicate that fully half the crops of Scotland have been destroyed by the storms. The harvest is at a standstill.

GONE TO THE SEASIDE.

Gov. Campbell Has Been Seriously Ill.

Dr. Loving Gives the Lie to Unprincipled Republican Organ Grinders.

Columbus, Sept. 3.—(Special)—It having been more than insinuated in various quarters that the illness of Gov. Campbell is but a political ruse, the writer to-day called upon Dr. Starling Loving and mentioned the matter, eliciting an expression from the governor's medical attendant.

"Well, I am aware," said Dr. Loving, "that such comment is rife, and the political aspect of the matter puts me in a very delicate position. All who know me are acquainted with my republican principles, and I have feared that it might be accused that I was needlessly detaining Gov. Campbell so as to abet the interest of my party. I have felt the delicacy of the situation, and deem it justice to myself and to my distinguished patient to state that his illness has been far from feigned."

"What has been the exact nature of his trouble," was asked.

"The governor has suffered from an attack of malarial fever with decided symptoms and tendencies of typhoid fever. While the symptoms have not at any time indicated great danger, yet the case has been a very unpleasant and uncomfortable one. The illness is such as runs at best from ten to twenty-one days.

"The governor has been ill now for about twenty days. For a large part of that time he was confined strictly to his room, and he has throughout been very feeble. He has while convalescent suffered himself against my protest to be annoyed somewhat with matters pertaining to his office, but I promptly forbade it. Indeed, I have steadily urged during his convalescence that just as soon as he was strong enough to travel he should go to the seashore, and there divest himself of every care concerning his position—refuse to see a telegram or a newspaper—and give all attention to the recovery of his health.

"He is now so far improved that I have recommended that he leave for Spring Lake or Atlantic City—the former place preferred."

"How long will he be obliged to remain at the beach? He will not be able to resume his political duties under a week, will he?"

"Indeed, no," replied the doctor with emphasis. "I do not expect his strength will be sufficiently restored for the resumption of his work before the 15th of the month."

The governor left last night for the east

CREWS IN SERVICE.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Supt. Kimball, of the life saving service, has put on the regular crews at 100 life saving stations along the Atlantic and gulf coasts. These crews, which average six men at a station, are regularly employed from the 1st of September until the 1st of May of each year. During the four summer months they are called upon as occasion requires and are simply paid as volunteers.

FIXED THE DATE.

Toronto, Sept. 3.—Gaudaur and Hanlan have agreed to row a match race at Hamilton, on the 10th inst., for $1,000 aside.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

Exciting Scenes in a Sons of Veterans Camp.

Half a Dozen Officers and Men Overcome by the Force of the Elements.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 3.—During a severe rain storm at Grand Island where the state Grand Army and Sons of Veterans reunion is being held, a lightning bolt struck the camp.

Two lieutenants and four sergeants of cavalry, troop K, were seated in the first sergeant's tent. The lightning struck the tent, scattering it in all directions. Nine men were struck.

When the alarm was given the two lieutenants and four sergeants were found lying flat in the tent with their heads buried in the debris. The guards were found lying on the ground. The injured are:

Sergeant Luebin, of Milford, knocked senseless and severely shocked.

First Sergeant Seymour, of Milford, terribly shocked and injured in the limbs.

Second Lieut. Vosberg, of Lincoln, injured in the arms and legs.

Lloyd Ensign, of Milford, shocked in the arms and body.

James Carr, of Staplehurt, injured in legs and body.

Halsey Bromwell, of Milford, injured in shoulder.

George L. Gerr, of Milford, severely shocked.

Frank Smith, of Milford, severely shocked.

When the alarm was sounded surgeons hurried to the scene. Capt. J. H. Culver of troop K transformed his headquarters into a temporary hospital for some of the injured, while others were provided for in an adjoining tent.

Sergeant Luebin is the most severely injured, but this morning the doctors believe all will recover. The tent was wrecked, and it is believed that had it not been for the metal on the pole many people in the surrounding tents would have been killed. On the arms and legs of the injured there appear great knots caused by the electric fluid.

The injured men are suffering intense pain, but their comrades are doing all in their power to relieve their sufferings.

VERDUGA UNDER ARREST.

Captured While Trying to Escape.

Believed He Was Aiming to Join Balmaceda.

Eleven Hundred Thousand Dollars Found on His Person and Confiscated.

New York, Sept. 3.—The Herald's Valparaiso dispatches this morning say: Deputy Verduga, one of Balmaceda's most ardent supporters, was captured yesterday at Talca while he was making his way out of the country, with the purpose, it is supposed, of joining his fleeing chief, either at Buenos Ayres or in Europe.

He was taken then to Santiago. He carried with him $800,000 in Chilian bank notes and $800,000 in drafts on London. This was promptly confiscated. There is little doubt but that Balmaceda is making his way over the Andes, through the South pass. It would be impossible to stop him.

No further news has been received here from the mob-stricken town of Caronel. The provincial government, however, has taken steps which will result in the restoration of order there in a short time.

THE BELL BOY OUT ON BAIL.

New York, Sept. 3.—Henry Cassin, the bell boy, who was convicted and sentenced six months ago to nine years imprisonment for the larceny of $18,000 from the safe of the hotel Vendome, was to-day admitted to bail pending an appeal of his case. Thomas Cunningham, a wealthy friend, went security for the boy's appearance in the sum of $5,000. The money stolen was the property of a bookmaker named Carlin.

MUST LOSE HIS RANK.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Attorney General Miller has decided that the remission of an unexpired part of a courtmartial sentence is not retroactive and that such punishment as had been suffered while it was in operation could not be rectified. In the case that called forth this opinion, a naval officer had been passed in number and sought to have his name put ahead of the two officers who had passed him while under sentence.

ROBBING THE POOR HOUSE.

Serious Charges Against Office Holders.

There Is No End to the Corruption Turned Up In Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Sept. 3.—(Special)—It was admitted in official circles to-day that George Roney has outlived his usefulness as director of public safety, and that Mayor Stuart has decided upon his removal.

The mayor took no official action in the matter beyond giving out for publication the correspondence in his possession relating to the charges of irregularities against Director Roney while superintendent of the almshouse and he had no comment on the subject to make public at that time, but it was pretty definitely understood that Roney's removal would be deferred for the briefest possible period.

Mayor Stuart left the city in the afternoon, to return on Friday, when he is expected to take this action. It was understood that his absence was not to be for the purpose of consulting with anyone on the almshouse case, but to consider undisturbed, the appointment of Director Roney's successor.

Mr. Roney has admitted that he used money belonging to the inmates of the almshouse, of which he was superintendent; and that an expensive walnut bedroom suite was taken from the almshouse to his private residence when he moved away.

Of this he claims to have been ignorant at the time. He also claims that the other things complained of were done innocently and that everything had been restored.

FOSTORIA DOINGS.

The L. E. and W. Strike Again Shows Effects.

Fostoria, O., Sept. 3.—The L. E. & W strike is on again. Manager Bradbury's schedule is not satisfactory to the men and does not settle their demands, therefore, the reopening of the strike.

No freights are coming east, and orders have been received not to take live stock or perishable freight for points west of Muncie. The prospects are for another long siege.

Following is result of the races yesterday at the N. W. O. fair being held in this city: 2-year-old, trot, Hailey V, first money, two heats, 2:53½ and 2:52¼ minutes; second money divided between Nyanza and Allenk. 2:30 pace—first money, Newsboy three heats, 2:32¼, 2:29¼ and 2:33.

STATIONARY ENGINEERS

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 3.—The national association of stationary engineers began its session to-day but the work of the day was confined to preliminary details and the appointment of standing committees. An excursion will be taken to Florence this afternoon to inspect the mammoth plant of the American waterworks company and this evening a banquet will be tendered.

MAY ALL HAVE TO GO.

Canada's Cabinet is Once More Tottering.

Rumored That Salisbury Has Asked Lord Stanley to Clean Out the Whole Crowd.

New York, Sept. 3.—A special to the Sun from Ottawa says it was rumored last night that in view of recent startling disclosures, Premier Abbott has called upon Secretary of State Chapleau to resign.

There is some talk of an early dissolution.

It is said that Lord Stanley has been urged by Lord Salisbury to dismiss his government and dissolve parliament in view of the startling revelations recently made.

It is said the government by no means reflects the sentiment of the people which is unmistakably in favor of the freest possible intercourse with the people of the United States.

SUGAR FOR HOGS.

The Dicker Made Between the U. S. and Germany.

New York, Sept. 3.—An arrangement has been made between the U. S. and Germany by which the latter country will revoke her decrees excluding American pork, in return for which the duty on beet sugar will not be restored. This arrangement will not take the form of a treaty but a proclamation will be issued by the president regarding the beet sugar duty as soon as he is officially notified of the removal by the German government of the restriction against American pork.

PROBABLY A FRAUD.

San Francisco, Sept. 3.—A Dayton, O., dispatch received here last night stated that a man who claimed to be Robert Weiland, son of the millionaire brewer, the late John Weiland of San Francisco, has been found with two bullet holes in his head.

Robert P. Weiland of San Francisco is now in Carlstad, Germany, and cablegrams have been received from him during the past few days. The Dayton Weiland was evidently an imposter.

PROCTOR HAS ACCEPTED.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Secretary Proctor has written a letter to Gov. Page, of Vermont, accepting the appointment to the federal senate.

BACK WITH THEIR SEALS.

Vessels Seem to be Doing a Big Business.

The Proclamation Has Not Disturbed Them to Any Alarming Extent.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 3.—The sealing schooners Sapphire, Carmanite and Watter A. Earle returned to port yesterday. All have made big catches.

The Sapphire brought 2,435 skins, making her total catch for the season 3,343. She was warned out of Bering sea by her majesty's steamship Porpoise, August 9. The Earle's seasons catch is 2,067, of which 1,021 were captured in the sea. She was warned to leave the sea by the Porpoise, August 12.

The Carmanite made a catch of 760 despite the bad weather and headed for Bering sea about the middle of July.

Just before reaching the pass she was driven on shore during a terrific hurricane which carried away her topsail and did other damage. She entered the sea on July 20. For 28 days she was among the seals which Capt. Carter says were very plentiful.

Indeed, he corroborates the story told by others who stated that there never was a season in which the seal were seen in such numbers. Finally his luck was stopped by the Nymphe which hove in sight and delivered the now familiar proclamation.

In obedience to the order Capt. Carter turned homeward, reaching port this morning with 1,639 skins taken in Bering Sea. The steam sealer Challenge, of Sehome, was spoken July 10 with 394 skins and a polar bear which had been captured in the Pacific.

BURNED AT HER DOCK.

The Steamer Corceran a Total Loss.

Washington, Sept. 3.—About six o'clock this morning fire was discovered on board the steamer W. W. Corcoran, lying at her wharf at the foot of Seventh street.

In an instant the flames spread to every part of the boat. The lines were cast off and the boat floated out into the river and lodged against the steamer George Leary lying at the next wharf.

A tug pulled the Corcoran across the channel to the flats where she burned to the waters edge.

The fire on the Leary was soon extinguished by the fire department with a loss of $1,000, principally to her upper works; covered by insurance.

The Corcoran was for twelve years the only means of travel to Mt. Vernon and on that account was well known throughout the United States. She was valued at $45,000 and was insured for $35,000. One life was lost—that of a colored boy named Robison, whose escape from the boat was cut off by the fire, and he jumped overboard and was drowned. The body was recovered. The fire is supposed to have originated in the fire room.

INTO AN OPEN SWITCH.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 3.—Engine No. 99, of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, drawing nine loaded cars, ran into an open switch at the Fair street crossing this morning. The engine was badly wrecked, the bridge wall destroyed and the engineer, E. B. Jones, had his leg so badly hurt it had to be amputated and he now lies in a precarious condition.

FATALLY INJURED.

New York, Sept. 3.—A team driven by Col. George M. Dickey took fright yesterday and ran away. Col. Dickey was thrown from the carriage and received painful injuries. Wm. Naylor, a young laborer, attempted to stop the team and succeeded; but one of the horses fell on him and he was so badly injuried that he died in a few hours.

TYPHOID FEVER.

Marquette, Mich., Sept. 3.—Typhoid fever is becoming epidemic in the city of Negaunee, this county. There are over 50 cases, four deaths, and people are taken down at the rate of five or six a day. The epidemic is owing to the filthy water from Teal lake, a pond about one mile long, which receives the drainage of a number of dwellings, slaughter houses and mines, and in which logs are collected and allowed to rot.

NEW BANKS.

Washington, Sept. 3.—The comptroller of the currency's certificate authorizing the following national banks to begin business was issued: The First National bank of California, Pa., capital $50,000; the Columbia National bank of Tacoma, Wash., capital $200,000; the First National bank of Roseburg, Ore., capital $50,000.

CONSULTED THE POWERS.

Washington, Sept. 3.—R. W. Shannon, United States minister to Costa Rica, Salvador and Nicaragua, was at the state department this morning and had a conference with Acting Secretary State Wharton. He will leave for his post in about ten days.

DAMAGED BY FIRE.

Salt Lake, Utah, Sept. 3.—The hoisting machinery in the shaft of the mine at Stockton, about thirty miles from here, was burned last night. Loss, $50,000. No lives were lost, the miners escaping by another outlet.

Neidringhaus, of St. Louis, owns the property.

CAR OF POWDER EXPLODES.

Winslow, Ariz., Sept. 3.—While a train was running at full speed near Denison Station, last night, a car of powder blew up, instantly killing Brakeman E. W. White and a stockman, August Beckman. They were riding on top of the cars.

AGAINST THE LOTTERIES.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Assistant Secretary Nettleton has instructed the collector of customs at Nogales, Ariz., to exercise due precautions to prevent the smuggling into the United States at that port of Mexican lottery tickets.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Zanesville, O., Sept. 3.—Miss Sarah Johnson, aged 63, died to-day from the effects of burns received from the explosion of a lighted lamp, which she dropped while walking across her room.

THE GRENADA INCIDENT.

Bloodshed Followed the Order of Sacasa.

New York, Sept. 3.—Advices from Corinto, Nicaragua, state that on August 23 the steamer Colima carried away to Costa Rica six prominent Nicaraguans sent into exile by President Sacasa, who accused them of plotting against him.

The exiles all lived at Grenada and while they were being taken from that city a mob attempted to rescue them. The soldiers fired without injuring anybody, and the mob replied with a volley which killed seven men, including the governor of the district, the lieutenant commanding the troops, three soldiers and two bystanders.

Re-enforcements arrived, the mob was dispersed, and the prisoners taken to Corinto. Among the exiles includes ex-President Favala and several members of the senate.

WRECKED IN A HURRICANE.

St. Johns, N. F., Sept. 3.—The brigantine Lizzie Horton, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., was struck by a hurricane August 30, driven on Gullinare shoals and totally wrecked.

The crew escaped in a boat without food, water, compass or clothing. They sighted three fishing vessels that day and one on Monday, but were unable to attract their attention.

After rowing for forty hours they were picked up by the schooner George Foote and brought into St. John's to-day.

Eight fishermen are reported lost in the same gale.

FOR AN AWFUL CRIME.

Ludington, Mich., Sept. 3.—This city is in a fever of excitement and a prisoner in the county jail who give his name as John Jones, his age as 30 years and his home as Chicago, is in great danger of being lynched. He attempted a criminal assault upon the 20-months-old child of Nelson Gady. The father caught the fiend soon after the crime and was about to kill him, but citizens prevented it. The little girl is lying in a critical condition. Jones will be tried this week.

DESTROYED BY FIRE.

The Dalles, Ore., Sept. 3.—Among the buildings destroyed by yesterday's fire were: The large brick building of Vogel & Coon, the opera house and the Third regiment armory. These buildings were only erected a year ago at a cost of $200,000. The city has no regular water supply and the utter helplessness of one fire engine was clearly demonstrated. A fortunate change in the wind was all that saved the greater part of the town from being wiped out.

FIELD OF GETTYSBURG.

Illinois Dedicates Her Monument To-day.

A Large Delegation Present to Witness the Very Interesting Ceremonies.

Gettysburg Pa., Sept. 3.—The monuments erected by the state of Illinois to the Eighth and Twelfth Illinois cavalry will be formally dedicated to-day with solemn services.

To-morrow the monument in memory of the fallen and in honor of the surviving members of the Eighty-second Illinois infantry will also be dedicated.

To-day's exercises are under the direction of Jacob Gross, of the Eighty-second infantry, W. N. Taylor, of the Eighth cavalry, and W. M. Luff, of the Twelfth cavalry.

The dedication exercises comprise a joint service of the three regiments, consisting of prayer, orations and music.

A large delegation is here from Illinois, including Gov. Fifer, Secretary of State Pearson, State Treasurer Wilson, Adjt.-Gen. Reese, Assistant Adjt.-Gen. Rankin, Gen. Charles Fitz-Simmons and many others.

The Illinois association of Washington, D. C., also comes on in force to participate in the event. The presentation of the memorials to the state is made by ex-Gov. Gen. John L. Beveridge, as major of the Eighth cavalry, and Gov. Fifer responds on behalf of the state. The services tomorrow will be precisely similar.

The legislature of Illinois appropriated $6,000 for the erection of the monuments dedicated to-day. They are all rough and dressed granite and are among the handsomest memorials on the battlefield at Gettysburg.

WORK OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Instructions as to the Australian Ballot.

All Parties Will Unite in Issuing a Circular on the Subject.

Columbus, Sept. 3.—Chairmen Hahn and Neal of the republican democratic state executive committee held a conference last night and discussed certain matters connected with the campaign.

The gentlemen agreed that it should be a campaign of issues and not of personalities. The national and state issues are of sufficient importance, as between the two parties, to furnish plenty of campaign material for the orators without taking up matters of a personal nature.

It is understood that both Major McKinley and Gov. Campbell are in accord with the views of the chairmen.

Another point of special interest discussed by Messrs. Neal and Hahn was the manner of voting under the Australian ballot the idea being to reach an agreement upon a circular of instructions to the electors and election officers.

It was decided to make an examination of the law with a view of determining the exact method of marking, and the duties of judges and clerks in counting the new ballots, together with the other matters connected with the inauguration of the Australian system of voting.

Judge Nash will probably act as counsel for the republicans in the examination. After all questions in connection with the law are determined, a joint circular of instructions, signed by Chairman Hahn on behalf of the republicans, Chairman Neal on behalf of the democrats and the chairmen of the prohibition and people's party committee, if the two latter desire to co-operate with the movement, will be issued and sent out from the different headquarters.

In this way it is hoped to avoid the mistakes and contentions likely to arise in the absence of an agreement between the parties.

CYCLONE'S WORK.

Brenham, Tex., Sept. 3.—A cyclone passed over Independence last night and much damage was done to cotton, some of the fields being laid completely waste. The residence and barns of Mr. Morelan were demolished and Mr. Morelan blown twenty feet. Lightning struck the house of Mrs. Rankin, knocking the inmates senseless.

CHARGED WITH CRIME.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 3.—John L. Cohoon, brother-in-law of Edward Albertson, the defaulting secretary of the Fidelity Trust Co., was arrested last night for complicity in the robbery. He denies any knowledge of the robbery or the whereabouts of Albertson.

MONEY BY THE BARREL.

Sherman is Bound to Succeed Himself.

Rings and Combinations Which Cause Caucus Packers to Blush With Admiration.

Columbus, Sept. 3.—The Press has the following interesting special:

Experienced republican politicians who have carefully watched the management and progress of this most important state campaign are greatly alarmed over the situations.

The present outlook for victory is far from bright and the ominous clouds are fast multiplying. Instead of being in a position to take advantage of the factionalism with which the democrats began their fight, the republicans find the state of affairs in their own party far more dangerous.

"There never was a campaign in Ohio in which the republican party had more at stake, and yet there probably never was a time when the prospects were less reassuring.

"The exalted state of harmony which was predicted for the republican party in this county existing only in a metaphysical sense, and those in charge of the campaign ship seem to be doing anything but pouring oil on the troubled waters.

Had the senatorial question not been sprung until after the election the tariff barons might have been successful in their desperate attempts to increase the workingman's burden.

Despite the declaration that the question of selecting Sherman's successor should receive no attention until after McKinley was crowned with victory, the state convention that nominated him had the senatorial question as more than an accompaniment.

Every reader of current politics will remember how the nomination of McKinley sank to the dimensions of a side show while the place assigned it was occupied by the senatorial circus. It does not require a telescope, either, to see that the senatorial squabble is still occupying the main pavillion.

It was hoped by all those who had the good of the party at heart that under judicious management, the Sherman-Foraker imbroglio would be put aside, however.

It was thought that those in charge of the campaign would soon be able to silence the ominous rumblings and restore peace. Instead of this line of action being pursued, however, the state executive committee, or at least its chairman, stands charged with feeding fuel to the flame.

It has been claimed all along by the friends of ex-Gov. Foraker that Chairman Hahn, as soon as he began the work of this campaign, inaugurated a fight for Sherman.

They have charged that he used his official position to manipulate all the party machinery in the interest of Senator Sherman's re-election. These assertions on the part of Foraker's friends do not seem to be without foundation, either.

In one or two instances, there is almost positive proof that Chairman Hahn did use his official position to advance or attempt to advance—Senator Sherman's interests.

The Press has reliable information to the effect that Chairman Hahn recently made a proposition along this line to President Squire of the Ohio republican league.

The chairman, it is said by gentlemen in a position to know whereof they speak, went to Pres't Squire and requested him to use the Ohio republican league as a Sherman factor.

Had the influence of the league been secured, a great step toward a Sherman victory would have been taken, but Mr. Squire was not of the same opinion as Mr. Hahn.

The former emphatically refused to do as requested. Although President Squire is a strong Foraker man, he has at all times kept the senatorial question out of his organization so far as his management or influence is concerned, and although he has earnestly sought to work hand in hand with the state committee, he drew the line on Chairman Hahn's request.

As a result of Chairman Hahn and President Squire failing to agree, it is said, they scarcely speak as they pass by.

Another interesting statement which comes from a reliable source is that Chairman Hahn has actually given his personal services to Senator Sherman's interests in the legislative contests of certain counties. More illustratons of the disruption of the committee and other features of the senatorial fight could be given, but sufficient have been mentioned to show how matters stand.

In view of this state of affairs it is not to be wondered at that a meeting of the state central committee to take radical action regarding the course of the campaign chairman was threatened, and it is no surprise that the close observers are greatly alarmed over the situation.

Senator Sherman has put dignity aside and come off his perch. The policy of viewing his antagonists with cool contempt has been abandoned, and so actively has he entered the campaign that even his friends are surprised by the departure from his custom.

Senator Sherman intends to have his old seat again, come what will.

The desperate character of his campaign is cropping out at every hand. His managers are not only resorting to skulduggery but to the use of money in a lavish manner.

Senator Sherman, so 'tis said by those who ought to know, has already put $20,000 into the campaign for the benefit of his fences, and this money is being used without stint.

In one county, it is said, $1,000 was used, and it is claimed that in the fight against Lieutenant-Governor Lampson more than that amount was expended. Several thousand dollars have already been placed in Lucas county by the Sherman men and more is to be used.

CAN HARRISON FIRE RAUM

The Raum Case Continues to Worry the Administration.

Noble Has Bounced Him But He Will Not Have to Go.

He Has a Pull With the Pension Sharks and They Control Hundreds of Delegates in National Convention.

Washington, Sept. 3.—It has been impossible so far to get either a denial or a confirmation of the report that Raum has been suspended by the secretary of the interior.

Raum has again disappeared from town and nobody seems to know his whereabouts, except that there is a general suspicion that he has gone west again to do some fine work for the notorious refrigerating scheme, of which he is president.

Raum has been absent from the Pension bureau very nearly half his time since he has been commissioner, yet he is only entitled to a vacation of thirty days in each year. His absences have been the cause of a good deal of annoyance to the secretary of the interior, and the secretary thought he could stop them by issuing a general order that no head of a bureau or employe of the interior department should absent himself from the city without obtaining a leave of absence from the secretary.

Raum has utterly ignored this order, just as he has utterly ignored Noble in all his wishes and desires regarding the conduct of the pension bureau.

As stated in these dispatches a few days ago the belief is very general among the chiefs of divisions in the pension bureau that Raum has been suspended by the secretary of the interior pending Harrison's absence from the city.

It is also the general belief, not only of the pension bureau people, but of government employes and politicians generally that Raum will be dismissed from the service before congress convenes.

Of course, every decent man understands that Raum ought to have been dismissed long ago. The poor, legless Tanner was fired, although he was a model official compared to Raum.

Tanner was too candid. He construed republican promises to the soldiers too liberally. He lived, or tried to live, up to the republican platform. He did not steal any himself personally, but he openly announced that the old soldier should have everything in sight that he could help them to.

Raum has been feathering his own nest and also the nests of the members of his family and of the Washington pension sharks.

His conduct of the pension bureau is a scandal and a disgrace. Almost from the day he became pension commissioner there has been nothing but a succession of scandals about the management of the bureau that would have long ago brought about the dismissal of any other officer of the government.

The secret of Raum's power over Harrison is that Raum is a pension shark himself and has been conducting his office in the interest of the pension sharks.

The pension sharks, it is estimated, are able to control fully 200 delegates to a national convention. Harrison will need these next year, and need them very much, hence Raum has a pull that is not to be sneezed at. Raum understands his power so thoroughly that he takes no notice of the orders or wishes of his superior officer, General Noble, but continues to run the bureau to suit himself.

Perhaps in a fit of desperation in defence of his own dignity, Noble embraced the opportunity given him by the statutes to suspend Raum in the absence of the president. It is certain that the work of the bureau is still being conducted over the signature, "Lincoln, Acting Commissioner."

Lincoln, like Raum, is a pension shark, and his business as such is still being conducted in this city by his partners. Lincoln, like Raum, too, has a good many schemes on hand for bleeding the pension clerks and those dependent upon his favors.

He is interested in suburban town-site companies and in other schemes of a more or less shady character.

In the meantime about $43,000,000 will be taken out of the treasury of the United States in a day or two to pay the pensioners for a quarter of a year.

It was stated in these dispatches nearly a month ago that the clerks of the pension bureau were engaged on what is called miscellaneous business. They have been answering letters, looking up old claims and loafing.

They have not been administering on any original claims, although they have been getting these claims in order so that they can rush them at a great gate when they go to work on them.

The reason for this is that there is not money enough in the treasury to meet all the demands of the pension bureau if original claims were rushed through in great force. Foster gave Raum his tip, and Raum held up the pressure for the past month.

When this statement was originally published Raum promptly denied it, but your correspondent has had ample opportunity to have the truth of his original statement confirmed since it was denied.

Now there will be a rush of original claims, and it is Raum's hope to put over $50,000 through before the 1st of January next. This will be in the nature of distributing $3,500,000 among the pension sharks.

Under the law, sharks are allowed a fee of $10 in each original case. They are very much afraid that when the next congress convenes the fee will be cut down to a dollar.

Mr. Dockery, of Missouri, has been paying attention to the sharks for some time past, and very nearly succeeded in passing a bill to cut off some of their plunder during the last congress, but the republican majority in the house and senate was too much for Mr. Dockery, and the sharks are still fattening on $10 fees.

For fear that the fees may be cut down by the next congress, Raum will devote his attention from now on to rushing as many original claims through as is possible in order that his friends, the sharks, may get as much as possible from the treasury before the reformers of the next congress get a chance to cut their teeth.

The chances are that Harrison, Raum and the pension sharks have reached some kind of an understanding and it need not surprise you if Raum went on drawing his salary as pension commissioner, permitting his assistant, Lincoln, to do the work for the pension sharks and some time before the next congress convenes quietly drop out of the service.

Neither Harrison nor Raum wants to go through the ordeal of an investigation by the next congress. This investigation is sure to come anyhow, but if Raum is out of the service he can whistle at the investigators.

But by continuing him in the service even nominally for a few months more he will be able to set the traps so that the sharks can rake in between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000, no matter what the reformers of the next house may do regarding fees in pension cases next winter.

GIVING THEM MORE TIME.

Official Announcement of the Failure

Of Secretary Foster's Great Bond Scheme, in Order to Let the Country Bankers Into the Deal.

Washington, Sept. 2.—Secretary Foster has issued the following circular extending the time for the presentation of 4½ per cent. bonds for extension at 2 per cent:

"Public notice is hereby given that the time within which the bonds of the 4½ per cent. loan will be received at the office of the secretary of the treasury for continuance with interest at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum has been extended until further notice and the circular of July 2, 1891, under which said bonds have heretofore been received for continuance, is modified accordingly.

"The interest at 4½ per cent. on all the bonds of said loan will cease this day, in accordance with the terms of the circular of June 2, 1891, but bonds presented for continuance under this circular will bear interest at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum from Sept. 2, 1891.

"Secretary Foster said the reason for the circular was found in the fact that a number of people were absent during the summer from their business and had not had an opportunity to present their bonds for extension.

At the close of business to-day the amount of 4½ per cent. bonds presented for extension at 2 per cent. aggregated $23,554,000.

The amount of bonds presented for redemption at the treasury department up to date was $3,986,700, and at New York $2,501,000, making a total of $6,487,700.

These bonds are payable in coin at the option of the holder, and it is thought will occasion a slight falling off in the gold held in the treasury.

PRINCE RUSSELL RULES.

"The Wants of My Boy Must Not Be Curbed."

An Incident Which Shows the Character of the Great Republican President.

Washington, Sept. 3.—When the steamship Majestic came in sight yesterday there was a great stir on board the revenue cutter Grant, which had gone down the bay to meet her.

On Monday Secretary Foster had refused to allow the cutter to go and receive Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. McKee, but Prince Russell, who loves to talk of how "pa and me" run the country, and how far Blaine comes from rising to the great state occasions, grew wroth, and the secretary pulled in his order, and allowed, as a compromise, that the steamer might escort the Majestic into port.

When pa heard of this state of affairs, it is rumored that the air assumed a deep blue hue, and that the little president stamped up and down the Keystone cottage porch in a terrible rage.

To think that anybody should put a straw in the way of the wishes of his boy, was more than the Indianapolis statesman could stand and the wires were immediately ordered to be shunted into the treasury department.

What passed over the wire is not known. This much is known, however. The Grant got up steam, glided gracefully out, met the Majestic and took off the president's family, while Prince Russell stood on the quarter deck, with the air of a conquering hero, that seemed to say to all on board: "Perhaps pa and me don't run this government, and then again, perhaps we do."

READY FOR REVOLUTION.

Hayti is in a State Bordering on War.

When It Does Break Out the Blood Will Flow Freely.

Bottled Up Hatred of Hippolyte Will Soon be Beyond Control and Awful Bloodshed Is Sure to Follow.

Port au Prince, Sept. 3.—That Hayti is in a great state of excitement nobody who is at all acquainted with affairs here can doubt for a minute.

Their trouble seems to be the old one, seen on every page of Haytian history—mutual jealousy and distrust and an entire incapacity to renounce selfish ambition for the common cause. There are six leaders all pulling in different directions.

It is furthermore reported and generally believed in Port au Prince that the revolutionary party is temporarily crippled by the treachery of a certain Count Delva, who, it is said, having been entrusted with a large sum of money designed to purchase arms and fit out a vessel of war, has quietly slipped away to Paris with the boodle instead of proceeding to some American port in the interests of his all too confiding brother rebels.

A gentleman who knows the Delva family said that the mother is receiving letters from her enterprising son postmarked Paris.

This financial embarrassment may, however, be easily arranged, for it is a well-known fact that the Kingston people have plenty of money.

Three of the leaders alone—Legitime, Fouchard and Prophete—could, if they chose, furnish two or three millions from their private fortunes, or, as their enemies say, their private stealings.

If the revolutionists were ready the present would seem to be a capital moment to strike, now that the forces of heaven have turned against Hippolyte and sunk the Toussaint L'Ouverture, the government's principal man-of-war. M. Valbroge, the chief engineer of the ill-fated vessel, left Martinique only a few days before the hurricane. Speaking of the accident, he said:

"The Toussaint was anchored near the wharf at Fort de France, and the irresistless force of the cyclone drove her again and again against the wall until her sides were crushed in and she sank. Had I been present I could have saved her by sealing up the partitions which separate her 16 air-tight compartments. Unfortunately, not foreseeing any such danger, I had left these open, and no one else was familiar with the keys. I have no doubt the ship will be raised. She lies in not more than eight fathoms of water. You know how the raising is done? Divers go down and calk up every chink and opening in the ship, so that she is watertight. Then suction pipes are let down from above and the water inside the vessel is pumped out. When that is done she rises of her own accord."

M. Valbroge had come on to Port au Prince to report to the government regarding the condition of the ships, which had just been thoroughly repaired and refitted. An absurd rumor had been in circulation that the Toussaint had been captured by the rebels.

Whether on account of this report or as a mere measure of precaution the government dispatched another man-of-war, the Belise, to Fort de France not many days since, and it is now a question whether the Belise also was not lost in the hurricane. Should such be the case the moment is certainly propitious for an invasion.

In spite of its apparent tranquillity Port au Prince is full of apprehension for the future. People who have seen many revolutions and know the signs which precede shake their heads ominously.

Hippolyte and his ministers are on pins and needles trying to get along with a chamber which is displaying toward the government an independence amounting almost to insolence, which is all the more remarkable in a country where the legislative body is notoriously the abject tool of the executive.

Under Salomon, for example, the chamber of deputies was the purest kind of a burlesque. Salomon chose the representatives of the nation according to his own arbitrary pleasure, had them elected if necessary at the point of the bayonet, paid them such bribes as he saw fit and, in short, owned them body and soul. He even went so far as to make these caricatures of legislators give him written receipts for the money given in exchange for their votes.

These receipts he afterward used as blackmailing levers in such cases as he could detect any traces of self-respect in the composition of these wretched creatures. Salomon's chamber would as soon have thought of attempting to stop the sun from rising as of thwarting or opposing any measure recommended by the government.

Speaking of the situation with a prominent Frenchman who has lived in Port au Prince many years, but who would not permit the use of his name. He was asked what would be the next scene in this republican farce.

"Why," said he, "the chamber will continue its obstructionist tactics until its support has been purchased with government gold. That is the key to the whole situation. The deputies know that the government cannot afford to have the telegraph bill permanently thrown out, as in that case according to their contract they would have to pay the cable company a forfeit of nearly $2,000,000. In a few days Hippolyte will see that it is much cheaper for him to pay up the regulation $500 to each deputy and have the bill passed quietly. That is the only way business can be carried on in this country."

"What do you think about the charge made against Firmin?"

"I suppose he stole considerable sum of money, as many other ministers have done, but I do not believe the entire two millions went to him. Much of it was used in paying the expenses of Hippolyte's campaign. Firmin will spend a year or so very pleasantly in Paris and come back to Hayti in time to be covered with honors under a new government, for it is a remarkable thing that to be detected in public dishonesty carries no disgrace in Hayti. On the contrary."

"Is there danger of trouble in Port au Prince in the near future?"

"My dear sir," said he, "I am as sure as a man can be of anything that before many days this city will witness many terrible scenes of bloodshed and violence. You will see these buildings in flames; you will hear rifle bullets whistling through the air. The people of Port au Prince hate Hippolyte, who is a man from the north, a conqueror who marched into their city by force and has stayed there by force. You have no conception of the intense feeling which exists between the inhabitants of the capital and the people of the Cape, which is Hippolyte's home.

"All that is needed now is a spark to precipitate the explosion. That spark may be struck at any moment and by the most trifling cause. Then Hippolyte will fall, at least such is my opinion, but be sure that he will drag down many with him. The president, none too sane at any time, becomes a raving maniac as soon as he smells powder and sees corpses strewn about him. As long as he has a soldier to command he will go on massacreing everybody in his reckless thirst for blood.

"To show you of what blind folly he is capable I will tell you an incident which happened during the assassinations the word is correctly used—of May 28. After Hippolyte had given the order to shoot Rigaud, the president's nephew, M. Bobo, recognizing that an act of injustice was being committed, took the responsibility of telling the aide-de-camp to delay the execution for a few moments while he interceded for the man's life with his uncle. Accompanied by the aide-de-camp, M. Bobo proceeded to the palace, where he found Hippolyte. With tears in his eyes he commenced pleading in Rigaud's behalf, but hardly had the first words passed his lips when the president, furious, almost foaming at the mouth, sprang at his nephew like a wild beast and cried out:

"'You dare to oppose me, do you? You would save Rigaud, would you? Fool, traitor, imbecile! Now you shall die with Rigaud. Take that man out and shoot the aide-de-camp also.'

"These last words were addressed to a guard of soldiers in attendance. At this moment, hearing the uproar, the president's son came hurrying into the room.

"'But, father,' he cried, 'for God's sake think what you are doing. You surely will not put to death your own flesh and blood?'

"Then Hippolyte swore such a string of oaths as only the creole language can produce, and working himself into a paroxysm of passion shouted out:

"'Kill my own flesh and blood! You shall see whether I fear to kill anybody. Officer, take him along with the rest and shoot him like a dog.'

"The order was given, the officer hesitated a moment before leading away the condemned men, but no one dared remonstrate. Five minutes more and a dozen bullets would have stretched not only Rigaud and the aide-de-camp but Hippolyte's own son and nephew lifeless on the Champ de Mars. And this shocking butchery was only averted by a hair's breadth. One of the best and bravest generals in the Haytian army, risking his own life, prostrated himself before the madman, kissing his hands, appealing to him as the friend of his boyhood and imploring him to alter his decision. Then only did Hippolyte relent, but not for Rigaud.

"'Take that man Rigaud out and shoot him at once, and let no one dare to dispute my authority,' he shouted.

"The aide-de-camp hurried Rigaud off to his death, and it is needless to add that Hippolyte was left free to do as he pleased the rest of the day. He might have massacred half the city and the other half would have done nothing but tremble.

"When his duty of reckoning comes it will be terrible!"

At Jeremie the correspondent had the honor of dining with General J. P. Durand. General Durand, though only 36 years of age, has won his spurs in many a hard fight, and is worthy of the important trust which has been conferred upon him.

"There is talk," said he, "of the revolutionists landing upon the territory which comes under my jurisdiction. Well, let them land; the sooner they come the better it will be. Oh, yes, I will let them come ashore, all of them, but I pledge you my word that not one man of them will ever go to sea again or ever take part in another battle. I shall order my soldiers not to spare a single life, and half an hour after the action has begun our only duty will be to bury the dead.

"No, I do not believe in taking prisoners or showing mercy. I never draw back from shedding blood. What difference do a few hundred lives make? Bah! We have women enough to make new soldiers and loyal ones. Besides, pitiless extermination at the start will be the most humane policy in the long run. Yes, indeed. My force here is overwhelmingly superior to anything they can bring against me. After dinner I will let you judge for yourself."

As he spoke the General had worked himself into a passion of excitement. His eyes flashed, his gestures were rapid and violent, so that the table service was in constant danger. One might have fancied that the enemy was already in sight.

FROM PORTER'S BUREAU.

Figures on the Criminals in Penitentiary.

Some of the Information That Has Cost This Government Millions to Secure.

Washington, Sept. 3.—The census office has issued a bulletin on the sentences imposed by the courts upon prisoners in penitentiaries.

Of 45,223 prisoners in penitentiaries, 53 were not sentenced, 2,486 were serving sentence of less than one year, 39,757 had been sentenced to imprisonment for a definite term of years, 2,688 for life, 12 during their minority, and 62 under sentence of death and awaiting execution.

Where sentence for a definite term of years is pronounced, the most common sentence is found to be for two years, and then, in the order stated, for five, three, one, ten, four, seven and six years. Nearly seven-eighths of all penitentiary sentences fall under one of these eight varieties. There are reported 132 sentences of 50 years and over, which 53 are for 99 years. The number of "fractional" sentences is also shown, which was 4,359; and taking them into the account the total duration of imprisonment for not less than one year, but less than for life, ordered by the courts was 28,210 years and 5 months. The average term of sentence therefore is 5 years and 270 days.

A tendency to greater severity of sentence is apparent in the south and west.

The average sentence of a native white convict, of native parents, is 5 years and 208 days; of a foreign born convict, 5 years and 193 days, and of a colored convict, 6 years and 183 days.

The average sentence of a male convict is five years and 285 days, and of a female convict four years and 215 days.

The differences between the average sentences in different states are a surprise. They range from two years and 356 days in Rhode Island to 12 years and 116 days in Mississippi, and seem to be governed by no discoverable law. States which join each other and in which the conditions are presumably similar, manifest differences in this regard which are unexplained.

For instance, the average sentence in New Hampshire is 2 years and 141 days more than in Maine, or about 50 per cent. greater. The difference in averages between Indiana and Illinois is 1 year and 240 days; between Wisconsin and Michigan, 1 year and 155 days; between West Virginia and Virginia, 2 years and 266 days; between Louisiana and Mississippi, 7 years and 103 days, and between North and South Dakota, 1 year and 309 days.

REPUBLICANS IN IOWA.

Gear Thinks His Party is Sure to Win.

They Will Make a Fight on the Tariff.

The Fear That the Democrats Will Gerrymander the State and Spoil Their Political Pie.

St. Louis, Sept. 3.—Ex-Governor and Congressman Gear has been in the city. Governor Gear is a gray-bearded, red-faced old gentlemen, tall and distinguished in appearance and an easy talker. He was accompanied on his trip by Mrs. Gear, a stately, dignified lady, who played casino with her husband and beat him three games out of five. The governor kept careful tab on the game, but somehow or other his good wife invariably won the lemonade.

"Governor," said the press representative, "what is going to be the result of this fall's campaign in Iowa?"

The governor, being an ardent republican, had his reply promptly at hand. He said:

"Why, sir, there isn't an earthly chance for the re-election of Governor Boies. The republicans are going to have a walkover."

"Weren't you beaten by a democrat at the last election?"

"Yes, and by a large majority. I'll tell you how that happened. There were two predominant issues in the last campaign—prohibition and the McKinley bill. A number of republicans who were opposed to prohibition, and a larger number of republicans who were opposed to the new tariff measure, voted for my opponent, and I lost by district by about 2,400. You see, I had a hand in the preparation of the McKinley bill. That bill contained 700 items, many of them providing for such radical changes that the people did not at first comprehend or appreciate them. I hurried home after the adjournment of congress and immediately began my canvass. But I found my people did not understand the McKinley bill. Why, when I told them that under its provisions they would soon be buying 25 pounds of sugar for $1, they couldn't believe it. Now, however, they are actually buying that amount of sugar for that amount of money, and at the next election there will not be a grease spot left of the democratic party in Iowa."

"What will become of the prohibition issue?"

"It will be prominent again, of course, and there will always be, I suppose, a certain number of republicans opposed to prohibition, but the people are in favor of it, or it would be speedily repealed. There are two other factors which will enter materially into the campaign. One is the enormously good crops and bountiful harvests. The other is that the republicans of Iowa are scared, and when you get a party alarmed it generally wins. You see, it will become necessary to redistrict the state for congressional purposes. The democrats may do this redistricting, and they will undoubtedly gerrymander the districts, to some extent. They are fools if they don't. We see what has happened in Michigan and some other states, and it has thoroughly arroused us to the necessity for vigorous action. Still another factor in our interest is the opposition of certain democrats to the free coinage of silver."

"Isn't Governor Boies popular with all classes of people?"

"Boies is a brilliant man and a splendid fellow. Personally I like him, but this is not to be a fight for men. It will be a fight for principles. I presided over the republican state convention, and in my opening address I didn't say anything mean about Boies. I only rapped him a little for his free trade speech at the New York banquet of free traders."

"Will you make any campaign speeches this fall, governor?"

"Oh, yes. I have a lot of notes and memoranda in my valise now, from which I will prepare an argument. I am going to keep the McKinley bill prominent before the people. You democrats have declared this to be a campaign of education. We are perfectly willing to meet you upon that ground. Of course there are some mistakes in the McKinley bill. Out of the 700 items—many of them involving radical changes—this was to be expected. For instance, I met Mr. E. C. Simmons of St. Louis when the bill was pending, and he made such an able argument against the tariff on guns and cutlery that he convinced me he was right. We had the item thrown out in the house, but it was restored in the senate. It was wrong, though, and I am opposed to that item.

"By the way I used to know quite a number of St. Louisans when I was engaged in business, but a large number of my old friends have died within the past few years. I knew the Januarys well and I knew Mr. Shapleigh, Mr. Hargadine and Mr. Brookings. Public business, however, has kept me away from St. Louis for a long time, and I have lost trace of many old acquaintances there."

In spite of Gov. Gear's apparent confidence in republican success in Iowa, it is easy of demonstration that the democrats of that state have entered upon a victorious campaign. Prohibition has proved a disreputable failure. Three years ago the authorities undertook to enforce the law by confining the saloons to their government licenses and sales by packages, but public opinion was so strongly opposed to it that to-day the saloons of all the Iowa cities are wide open and selling drinks over the bar. At Keokuk, Burlington, Davenport and Dubuque liquors are sold as openly as in St. Louis. Nobody questions the utter failure of prohibition, and Gov. Boies recently made an annihilating attack upon it in his opening address of the campaign.

The republicans of Iowa, too, are demanding to know of Gov. Gear and other party leaders why it is a good thing to have free sugar and a bad thing to have a tariff on cutlery and guns, and yet a righteous thing to have a high tariff on all the necessaries of life.

When it comes to a campaign of education, the republicans are going to be kept very busy.

Besides, the democrats have in Gov. Boies a brilliant leader, a statesman of national repute, whose splendid administration has won the confidence of the people. Iowa has no state debt. Its treasury is overflowing, and its prosperity resulting from democratic economy in the government will give the democrats of that state another tremendous victory.

Gov. Gear is whistling through the republican graveyard. That's all.

THAT STONE ROAD,

Citizens Indorse Engineer Bodette's Findings

As to Measurements Made Recently.

Prosecutor Barber Asked for a Written Opinion—Peculiar Action of Messrs. Cook and Engelhart.

Commissioners Cook and Englehart have shown their hand in the Central avenue stone road matter.

Arrangements had been previously made that the commissioners, Surveyor Wilhelm, Prosecutor Barber, Deputy Auditor Ely and a committee of citizens were to meet at the court house yesterday morning, and at 10 o'clock go out and measure the masonry which had been excavated.

At the appointed time W. H. Scott, G. H. Lloyd, Frank Uhl, Frank Eurich, Walter Ely, Prosecutor Booth, and Commissioner Pray were on hand, and left for the scene, but Commissioners Englehart and Cooke failed to put in an appearance.

The party went out and measured the masonry and returned to the city. They remained on the road from 12 to 4 o'clock, but during that time nothing was seen of the two county commissioners or Surveyor Wilhelm.

In the evening they gave out the report that they were out on the road according to agreement, but no one showed up and they returned in disgust.

To-day Prosecuting Attorney Barber and Commissioner Pray reported at a meeting of the board that their measurements made yesterday by them confirmed Engineer Bodette's measurements, and this is the report made by all who were present when the measurements were made.

It is all plain enough now why Cook, Englehart and Wilhelm were not present. Several parties yesterday reported that they saw Commissioners Cook and Englehart and Surveyor Wilhelm and his attorney drive along the road and pass the exposed masonry without so much as pulling the team down to a walk. They returned by another route.

To-day they adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved that J. A. Barber, prosecuting attorney, be and is hereby requested to furnish this board a written opinion of what he would recommend as a proper course to be pursued by this board in the matter of the disputed measurements of masonry on stone road 13."

WHO AM I, ANYWAY?

Mayor Emmick's Interrogation to Solicitor Read.

The Latter Tells Him a Few Things as to His Duties—He's Not Such a Big Gun After All.

At 9:30 this morning Mayor Emmick went pacing into the city solicitor's office at a gait better than 3 minutes, puffing and blowing like a porpoise.

The solicitor arose and grasped the chief magistrate's extended hand with with "Good morning, how's the mayor?"

"That's just what I want to know. Who am I? Where do I stand as mayor of Toledo? What power have I? What jurisdiction have I over the police department of Toledo? What figure do I cut on the police board? Whose orders are to be obeyed, mine or the police board?

The effort almost overpowered the corpulent magistrate, and having exhausted his supply of oxygen he began to get black in the face.

The office boy ran for a tub of water and the solicitor grabbed a fan and stirred up the atmosphere while he guided the "blowed" official to a seat.

He revived before the boy came with the water and began firing interrogations with greater rapidity than a Gatling gun. The solicitor, after repeated efforts, induced His Honor to calm down.

After catching his second wind the mayor continued; "Some people claim that I have no more power than any member of the police board. What I want to know is, what are my duties as mayor of Toledo? When I give an order to the chief of police, has the police board any right to rescind that order?"

When Mayor Emmick had quieted down after the second outburst, Solicitor Read informed him that he had no more control of the police department than any other member of the board, that he had one vote, and there his jurisdiction in that respect ended.

"Then the police board really controls the police department?"

"That's the way I construe the law. The police board appoints and discharges all members of the force from the chief down. If you, as mayor, desire to make any directions you will report the same to the board and they will act on it the same as any other business. The mayor has no more right to exercise any more authority over the police than any other member of the board."

The city solicitor gave Mr. Emmick his opinion to this effect in writing as requested, and Vince retired.

SENECA PROHIBS.

Tiffin, O., Sept. 3.—The prohibitionists of Seneca county, to the number of less than a score, met at the board of trade rooms yesterday and named a ticket as follows:

State Senator—Rev. F. S. Lyon, of Tiffin.
Representative—S. E. Neikirk.
Auditor—Jessie T. Sneath.
Commissioner—J. H. Barr.
Treasurer—James Bolin.
Infirmary Director—Chas. Rhodes.
Coroner—Dr. L. H. Hinckley.

'TWILL ALWAYS BE THUS.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Conrad Kohler, aged 19, last night after amusing himself by firing at a dog several times with a revolver, turned his weapon on Charlotte Brehm, a young woman standing near by. The bullet entered her head behind the left ear, killing her instantly. Kohler was arrested. He says he thought he had fired off all the charges.

CHARGED WITH CROOKEDNESS.

Tiffin, Sept. 3.—(Special)—The arrest of Col. Ed Jones, a prominent music dealer of this city, last night, caused some interest but little surprise. Jones, according to the allegations of the prosecuting witness, Mrs. Ellen E. Heilman, wife of a farmer residing near the city, obtained her signature to a note for $350 by false pretenses of the Bohemian oats character, and she concluded to "make him sweat for it." He was released upon a bond of $500 for a future hearing.

THE POPE'S DEPARTURE.

Rome, Sept. 3.—The Osservatore Romano, in an article which is regarded as written for the purpose of paving the way for the holding of a conclave abroad, says that the departure of the pope from Rome is quite possible if the general situation in Italy becomes worse.

ALL ON BOARD DROWNED.

San Francisco, Sept. 3.—The schooner Paloma, from the Marshall islands for San Francisco, was wrecked on the Hawaiian reefs and all on board were drowned, including the crew of seven men, Captain George D. Lovedale, of San Diego, Mrs. L. vedale and the captains three children.

KILLED AN INDIAN.

Frezier, I. T., Sept. 3.—An Indian chief named Poland was shot and killed near Mangum yesterday in a dispute over cattle. The cowboy, Bob Booher, who did the shooting, has surrendered himself. Trouble is feared, and troops have been asked for from Ft. Sill.

IRENE ACQUITTED.

The First Fruits of Mayor Emmick's Raid Little To His Credit.

The jury in the case against Irene Levy for keeping a house of ill fame returned a verdict of not guilty in the police court last evening. The case had been on trial for two days, but the state was unable to bring forth any evidence of consequence. Attorneys Ritchie and Bloch represented the defendant and did not introduce any evidence, letting the case rest with their arguments.

This is the result of Mayor Emmick's boasted raid and from appearances the other cases will prove no better. The city will be at the cost of prosecution in order that the mayor may get a little doubtful glory for his zeal. This result is also due to mismanagement in the police court, for on the morning after the raid all the women were ready to plead guilty and pay their fines. Prosecutor Wheeler and Judge Sala were informed of this fact but the Judge would not hear the cases until afternoon and by that time the women had employed counsel, and decided to fight and on the first case tried an acquittal was obtained. Belle Stevenson is being tried to-day on the same charge and the struggle of the state to make a case is just about as much of a farce as in the Levy case.

THE C., H. V. & T. TROUBLE

A Clover Leaf Traffic Arrangement.

The Toledo Railroad Clerks—Coal Cars Ordered—Strangers in Town—Other Matters.

The Columbus, Hocking Valley & Toledo railroad employes desire it understood that it is not only the engineers and firemen that have presented grievances but all the train men. They claim that the reply of the officials has adjusted none of the grievances and that while it covers a good deal of paper it don't say much.

The engineers asked for an advance of one-fourth of a cent a mile on mogul engines, which would then be one-fourth of a cent below the amount paid by other roads, and also that the scale of the Hocking Valley and River divisions be made the same as the Toledo division.

The men say that they desire to make no trouble but also that they are not satisfied with the answer from the company. They have called a meeting of the grand officers of the different railway organizations interested to see if they can meet with better success than the men

Toledo Railroad Clerks.

A meeting of the Toledo Railway Clerks association was held last evening and the delegates to the coming convention at St. Louis were instructed as to the attitude of the local branch toward certain amendments to the constitution. The Toledo association have prepared a ritual that they will make effort to have adopted for the use of the general body.

It is expected that everything will be in readiness by next week.

A HORSE RACE ON THE STAGE.

The advance sale for "The County Fair" opened to-day, and next Monday this delightful comedy commences its engagement at the Wheeler's for a week. "The County Fair" is a well-written story of New England life, with characteristic features. Its humor is quaint but irresistible, and its stage presentation is highly realistic. The great scene is the race, which is run in full view of the audience.

"FRIENDS" MUST ACT.

Many republicans in the city are receiving circular notes containg the following admonition:

TOLEDO, Aug. 31, 1891.

"FRIEND:" You are reminded that you should attend your party caucuses. Observe the daily papers for time and place, and act.

The note is unsigned. There is very good advice extended, but it lacks information as to for whom the power of action should be brought into play.

MRS. J. S. MORRIS SURPRISED.

Last evening Mrs. J. S. Morris, wife of Superintendent Morris, of the Pennsylvania railroad, was agreeably surprised at her residence on Superior street. The surprise in question was the unexpected arrival of a party of friends at her door, the occasion being Mrs. Morris' birthday anniversary. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Fred Morris and it proved a most enjoyable event.

An elegant dinner was served. Twelve covers were laid and the following ladies and gentlemen were present: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Janes, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Franz, and Mr. Franz's sister, Mrs. Clymer, of Bucyrus, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Dempsey and Miss Anna Charlton, of Pittsburg. It was a very pleasant gathering and all wished Mrs. Morris no end of just as pleasant birthdays to come.

JUDICIARY COMMITTEE DISCUSS CLAIMS.

The council committee on judiciary met last evening for the first time in a month and transacted considerable business.

The claim of Mrs. Fero, who asks $5,000 for a broken limb sustained by a fall on a defective sidewalk, again came up for consideration. Dr. Thorn, the physician who attended her, made a statement of her injuries and the case was discussed briefly, after which it was referred to Messrs. Morganthaler and Bay and the city solicitor to make further investigations.

A large number of claims for abatements of assessments and the like came up. Some were allowed, some rejected and others referred to sub-committees for investigation.

SHORT IN HIS ACCOUNTS.

An Allen County Officer Has Gone Wrong.

Lima, O., Sept. 3.—Jacob Hilty, a leading democrat of this county, and for the past two years treasurer of Richland township, turns out a defaulter to the tune of over $2,000, and the shortage was not discovered until the office was turned over to his successor.

The start of his shortage commenced about a year ago, when the firm of Hilty & Garan, of which the treasurer was a member, sold their dry goods store. The buyer did not have the cash to pay for all of the stock and gave his paper for the balance. On the strength of this paper Hilty appropriated $1,200 of the township's money. When the time for lifting the paper came around the maker failed and his note was worthless.

Hilty had no other property or securities that he could convert, and, as a result, he could not cover up his deal.

The rest of the shortage dates at different intervals during the last year of his office.

MUSGRAVE IS IN CHICAGO

And the Terre Haute Mystery is Explained.

His Partner in Crime Has Confessed.

A Scheme to Get Thirty Thousand Dollars Insurance Which Was Nipped in the Bud.

Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 3.—The entire desperate conspiracy in the Musgrave case was laid bare last night by the sensational testimony of Frederick Markle, brother-in-law of B. R. Musgrave, the fugitive forger and life insurance swindler, and the confession of Charles M. Trout, the young real estate dealer, who from the beginning was suspected of being a confederate in the burning of the log cabin and the finding of the remains.

Both of these witnesses told their stories to the coroner, and after Trout, who was laboring under intense nervous agitation had completed his statement, he was arrested on warrants charging him with arson, conspiracy to defraud and perjury. Trout first confessed to Detective Dwyer, and then he went directly before the coroner.

Late yesterday afternoon Markle, who is a reputable citizen of this city, appeared at police headquarters. He seemed to have something on his mind that he had to tell, and it turned out to be a sensational interview he had with Musgrave at Chicago last Wednesday week, four days after the burning of the log cabin. Markle's wife is Musgrave's sister.

Trout confided to him that Musgrave was alive and in hiding at Chicago, 4345 Berkley avenue, under the alias of T. G. Thornton; that the remains burned in the log cabin fire were those of a skeleton that Musgrave brought from Chicago in a box, and that the only mistake they had made was not leaving some of his pants buttons, shoes or his watch to be burnt.

Markle told the coroner that he promised Trout not to reveal what he told him in a mortal soul, but as Markle's wife had loaned her brother $200 not long since to loan out at Chicago, and as nothing further was heard of the money, he thought it best to visit Chicago and try and find Musgrave. Markle said he met Musgrave about 4 o'clock near the Oakland hotel, near Forty-seventh street. Musgrave, who was much changed in appearance, was surprised to see him.

"Why did you do this?" was the first question addressed to the fugitive. He said he did it to try to get the insurance; that he was insured for $30,000, and that he had decided to risk a play on that kind of a game.

The brother-in-law upbraided him, saying he thought one experience as a fugitive was enough; that he was killing his family by his criminal habits.

All Musgrave said was that if he had $500 he coul escape to Europe and be out of harm's way, but Markle told him that detectives were everywhere hunting for him, and he stood no show of escaping. Musgrave gave Markle $10 on account, and wanted to see him again next morning, but Markle did not go back.

Trout, when told Markle had made a a clean breast of what he knew about the affair, weakened and confessed all in the presence of the coroner. Pinkerton's detective and police officials. His dejected appearance on the witness stand as he made the most damaging statements was pitiable in the extreme.

The story of the conspiracy is a thrilling one. Musgrave conceived the idea in Chicago the early part of August to insure heavily in a number of companies and then disappear.

This scheme was largely suggested, according to Trout, by the fact that C. W. Mancourse was threatening to cause his arrest on the Mrs. Dr. Ball forged mortgage in case Musgrave did not pay the $2,000 involved by the forgery.

As Musgrave had no money he could not settle, and hence he was liable to arrest. Musgrave took out $10,000 accident insurance in the United States Mutual, $5,000 in the Aetna and $15,000 in two other companies.

He generously distributed the insurance in this way: $2,000 payable to his mother, $5,000 to his sister, Miss Anna Musgrave, and $5,000 to his affianced, Miss Catherine McLaughlin, residing in Minneapolis, Minn.

On August 20 he purchased a skeleton at the store of Parsons & Co., dealers in skeletons for museum purposes, St. Louis, paying $105 therefor.

This skeleton was shipped by Wells-Fargo express on August 24 in the Wells-Fargo Express on August 24 in the name of T. B. Burnham, and was taken away by Musgrave, who brought it to Otter Creek Junction, near Terre Haute, Trout accompanying him.

It was contained in a box a foot square and two feet long, and was carried by Musgrave along with a valise across the prairie to the cabin.

Musgrave took up his abode in the lonely cabin Saturday morning. It was now in order to establish that Musgrave was really in the cabin. Trout should work several prominent Knights of Pythias and others to go up and see him, and this was done.

Sunday night Trout and Musgrave took the skeleton out of the box. Trout said that Musgrave trembled, and was so nervous he could do nothing. "This thing has gone too far to back out now," said Trout, and he laid out the skeleton in the bunk among the straw and placed the Knights of Pythias emblem with Musgrave's name on it beside it.

Musgrave fired the cabin about 10 o'clock, and it was his tracks to the cornfield that were seen by the farmers. When he saw that the fire had a good start he crossed over to the junction and caught the train for Chicago.

Trout gives Musgrave's whereabouts as 7436 St. Lawrence avenue, which differs from that given by Markle. The valise and box were left in the cabin, also Musgrave's spectacles. They talked about leaving his shoes also, but, as he only had the pair on his feet, thought it too risky to try to buy a new pair at Tecumseh or in Terre Haute.

Musgrave did not leave his watch, either. The skeleton was hung together by cat-gut in the usual manner of museum skeletons.

Trout claims he tried to dissuade Musgrave from his desperate designs, but did not succeed. He also claims he was to have no share in the insurance money in case it was paid, but that is not believed. In case the scheme worked Musgrave was to tak his mother and sister to England and live.

By far the larger per cent. of flour consumed in Toledo is Taylor's flour. This is sufficient proof that it is the best floor in the market.

IN TRADING CIRCLES

Both at Our Home and Abroad.

Wheat Quotations for the Day—Price Current for Produce and Other Articles.

The market quotations in the BEE are compiled from United Press special dispatches and from reports received by the Toledo Produce Exchange, and specially arranged by Mr. Denison B. Smith, secretary of the Exchange.

OFFICE OF THE TOLEDO BEE, TOLEDO, O., Sept. 3.

Notice.—Some little time since the L. S. & M. S. R'y Co. issued a circular advancing the rate of storage on grain in their elevator "A." This circular was issued in consequence of a great pressure of grain, and a fear of a blockade. The circular has since been recalled, and the storage is restored to the old price.

London wheat market weaker and 3 pence per quarter lower. Corn steadily held. Weather fine. Liverpool wheat 1 penny per 100 pounds lower. Corn steady.

The receipts of wheat to-day at seven principal western points are 944,219 bu, compared with 197,732 bu on the same day last year.

Damage by flood in Ireland.—Dublin, Sept. 2—Dispatches from Waterford state that the river Barrow, in consequence of the recent heavy rainstorms has overflowed, and that the waters are flooding thousands of acres of land and destroying the crops near the river banks. In addition, the waters are sweeping away many houses, barns and other similar buildings, and generally the flood is causing much damage and consequent distress.

Crops Ruined in Scotland.

Edinburgh, Sept. 2.—The recent storms which have swept over the British islands have half ruined the crops throughout Scotland, and the harvest is at a complete standstill.

The harvest prospects of North Wales are unpromising. In some instances crops are completely ruined, and the fruit crop is suffering.

A Splendid Showing.—Under the above caption the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of Sept. 2 says: The receipts of wheat at that port for July and August were 8,822,000 bu against 4,646,000 bus in the corresponding period in 1890. The article congratulates St. Louis on this increase, and so do we. We are always ready to welcome prosperity to our neighbors, but the editor also says: "The cause of the large receipts is that shippers have recognized the fact that not only is the St. Louis inspection liberal but also that the prices are more favorable to the grain owner than those of any other city."

We respond that receipts are greater this year every where than last, because of increased production. For example, Toledo has received, July 1 to August 29, 10,359,000 bu of wheat, or more than 2,000,000 bu in excess of St. Louis, and we further state, that neither in the grading of wheat, or in price results is the statement of the St. Louis paper accurate. We do not object to a little flatuleney, in our neighbors, low and then, but be truthful. St. Louis is too far from Toledo to ever become much of a wheat market.

The receipts of wheat to-day at seven principal western points are 746,482 bu in excess of the corresponding Tuesday in 1890.

The export clearances at four Atlantic points were 920,543 bu, and flour to an aggregate of 1,060,000 bu.

English markets as reported herein are lower, and are lower because American dealers lack sand, and are permitting prices to decline.

The Wheat Situation.

We have occasionally pointed out the great change in the basis of wheat values this year as compared with any previous year. The more we learn about the situation the more we are convinced that no man now living has ever witnessed a condition of supply and demand for breadstuffs so completely in elements of strength for American prices as this year now presents to us. We need not rehash the figures for the deficiencies in England, France, Germany and Russia. The events over there indicate plainly enough the serious nature of the loss. The Russian prohibition, the German contest in the government cabinet, and which may yet result in a crisis, the French reduction in import duties, and the confessions from English authorities that possibly the loss in the crop in the united kingdom by late, wet weather may aggregate 15,000,000 bu. All this evidence is conclusive. Besides the above the crops of Holland, Belgium and Italy are also deficient in either rye or wheat. We do not intend to exaggerate the misfortunes abroad, nor would we like to see our prices advance largely, but we most heartily deprecate two conditions prevailing in this country. First is the apparent want of courage on the part of capitalists to invest in wheat, and the next is the reckless disposition of the fraternity of short sellers to pound down prices. Not an advance in prices has occurred on this side that has not been reflected abroad, and not a decline that has not been met in a corresponding break over there.

Europe and England bought 15,000,000 bu of wheat of us early in the season before wheat moved. If there had been only half as many sellers the competition would have been sharper and the price higher.

We are near the end for the present of the large movement of winter wheat. Farmers are not selling nearly so much. Receipts at the lake ports will decrease, and this may have the effect to impart confidence in our dealers in the real value of wheat. So mote it be.

It has been everybodys market for grain to-day on this side of the ocean. The bears had their innings first, and then the bulls, and in fact the market changed its complexion three times. The most tastidious should be satisfied. The export clearances from four Atlantic ports, flour and wheat, equal 1,060,000 bu. On the last upward turn December wheat in Chicago sold up 2c above yesterday's close, and New York 1¾c. But it did not hold, and part of the advance was lost.

Corn has been strong and has advanced.

Oats at Chicago are ¾c up for September.

In New York September wheat closed at a gain of 1c and December a gain of 7c. September corn closed 1⅞c higher and at 1¾c.

In Chicago September wheat closed ⅝c up and December 1c. September corn 2c and October 2¼c higher.

In Toledo.—There has been a fair increase in the trading in wheat futures with considerable unsteadiness in prices, but with a final advance of 1c to 1¼c, with a firmer, healthier tone. On the call Sept. No. 2 red sold at 96¾c to 99c and closed at 97½c; Dec. at $1 02¾ to $1 03 and closed at $1 02¾. After the call September wheat sold at 99c to 98½c, and closed at 99¾c, a gain of 1c; October sold at $1 00 to 99¾c; December at $1 02¾ to $1 02, and closed at $1 03⅛, a gain of 1⅜c.

Cash wheat was again in good demand and the sales were large. Prices closed 1c up. No 2 soft sold at 98½c to 98c and closed at 99¾c; No 3 soft sold at 94½c to 97c; rejected No 1 at 88c to 86c; No 1 white, 96c; No 2 white at 94c; wheat and rye, sample, at 86c.

For Common Pleas Judge,
GRAYSON MILLS, Erie County.

The Mayor and the officers of the police court are wholly responsible for the open saloons on Sunday. Police Commissioner Staiger has torn the mask from these gentlemen and they appear in the double rple of conspirators and abettors of law breaking. The attempt to put the odium on Chief O'Dwyer has miserably failed. He has obeyed orders, but the court has failed to do its duty. Now that the light of revelation is let in upon the Mayor, the judge and the prosecutor, the future conduct of these worthies will be interesting to the public.

Minister Phelps has informed the German government that "the patience of President Harrison and Secretary Blaine will not last beyond September." He fails to state just what the reprisal will be if the American hog is not admitted to Germany by that time, but if the emperor understood the emergencies of the Ohio campaign he would see the urgency of the case from the republican standpoint. There must be something for its orators to point with pride to during October, and the Ohio sheep is out of the question.

The republican press is disposed to rap President W. I. Squire over the knuckles for conducting a vigorous club campaign. The complaining editors will find the President with a big P a hard customer to handle. He is a Foraker republican, has the club organization well in hand, is aggressive and pugnacious, and is never tiring in his political work. Moreover, he is wealthy, and if the party will not supply the necessary funds he will pay all expenses out of his own pocket. That's the kind of a man our Mr. Squire is. He is in the present campaign to remain to the finish. His reward for faithful work is to be the railway commissionership, which office has been promised Mr. Squire by Candidate McKinley.

It is a pity now when everything else is moving smoothly for the world's fair business that there arises the ugly contingency of lack of sufficient funds. Expenses must be cut, and the salary of the commissioners reduced. It is fortunate that these gentlemen have sufficient means to do the work without what would be proper compensation, and that they are sufficiently public-spirited to be willing so to do. President Palmer has already stated that he will take no compensation for his work except for actual traveling expenses. Yet it is probable the next congress must be called upon to vote another appropriation for the fair at a time when, thanks to past extravagence, it will be needful to exercise the utmost economy in deciding what are necessary expenditures of the public funds.

Under state authority a census-taking was begun this week in Boston to ascertain the number of people living in tenement houses, the sanitary condition of the houses, and the degree to which they are crowded. The public will thus receive an official and detailed statement of the social and sanitary conditions under which a large number of people live, which is a necessary antecedent to a reform of these conditions. There is no question that in very many of the cities in the United States the modern tenement-house system is pestilential in its unwholesomeness, and it is to the general good that reform be instituted. Ohio is remarkably free from this curse. The tenement house system, in the modern acceptation of the term, is absolutely unknown in Toledo. Even wicked Cincinnati is free from it, thanks largely to the building of workingmen's homes in suburbs, with the aid of building and loan associations.

The revelations of Raum's rottenness in his conduct of the affairs of the pension department are heart-sickening to every man who has any love of country or pride in its institutions. It is evident Secretary Noble has borne a great deal from the insolent commissioner, though why he should so long have permitted open violation of his orders is not so clear. That he has suspended Mr. Raum during the absence of President Harrison from Washington should not be taken as evidence that the president will stand by the commissioner against his secretary. It should be believed, until strong evidence to the contrary is offered, that President Harrison and Secretary Noble will unite to purge the pension department of Raum and all his sharks now that its frauds are generally known and some of them specifically stated. No other honorable course is open to them, and no other course is safe for them.

The Courier-Journal strikes a home truth when it says that if it were not for the necessity of raising a big campaign fund republicans would abandon the defense of high tariff. As individuals republican party leaders realize what a humbug the high protection theory is, often better than do their following. As party manipulators they have found the support of the theory useful in the fat-frying operation of raising funds for campaign purposes out of its beneficiaries. They followed this course till they found it only too successful, till these same protected manufacturers were their only solid backing. Now they are in the position of the gentleman of contemporaneous history with "them steers." They can neither hold on nor let go. After all, in politics as in every other relation of man to man honesty is the best policy. Honest convictions honestly supported is the only sound foundation for a political party to stand upon. No other is quite as disgusted with the tariff of to-day as are its ostensible advocates, its high priest included. The desperate effort to evade its discussion in the present campaign is evidence.

A chain of circumstantial evidence of the most damaging character seems to be wound around the service of Minister Egan in Chili. It is currently reported and is believed in several of the large European capitals that Mr. Egan accepted a heavy bribe from Dictator Balmaceda to keep the state department misinformed as to the status of affairs in Chili. A member of the diplomatic corps recently returned from Europe is authority for the statement that a draft for $100,000, drawn by the dictator on his agent in London, has been traced almost into Minister Egan's hands. This charge is made in Washington, and is creating considerable perturbation at the state department. Everybody at the department headquarters professes ignorance of everything in connection with Mr. Egan's course. It is not to be supposed that his motive for misrepresenting Chilian affairs was known there. But at least when every newspaper in the country, outside of a few administration organs, knew and gave evidence that the insurgents were in the right and would be victorious, it would seem that the department might have known something of the real state of affairs. Its blunder should be minimized as much as possible. Minister Egan should be recalled promptly, and the constitutional government now in control of Chili should be as promptly recognized.

The Toronto Empire, which is the rabid tory organ of the Dominion, opposed to annexation, opposed to reciprocity, opposed to everything that would further mutually profitable relations between Canada and the United States, is much taken aback by the late census report which shows the population of the Dominion to have increased only little more than 11 per cent. in the decade. This is contrary to all the preachments of the Empire during that period, which have been to the effect that Canada was more prosperous in every respect than the United States, and was the promised land for English speaking emigrants. In trying to account for the state of things the census shows the Empire is consistent with its own policy. It throws all the blame upon the liberal party in Canada and the United States, dividing it about equally between the two Here are specimens of its reasoning:

It will always be impossible to compute in arithmetical terms the loss Canada has sustained by the never-ending pessimism of the Opposition. The slightest cause will oftentimes turn a fairly prosperous citizen despondent, and induce him to start for fresh woods and pastures new; will suffice to drive an intending emigrant off to some other country.

Every industrious emigrant willing to till the land and possessing a moderate slice of capital can amass a competency in a very few years. But is he likely to do so when Opposition newspapers are put into his hand by United States railway agents averring that a blight has fallen on the land and the whole country is going to the devil?

RIGHT ON OUR SIDE.

Democrats in Ohio have a hard task before them. Although they have an irreproachable candidate and are in the field with the spirit of Evangelists, their antagonists are the whole republican party of the country. They are fighting the experience of years and all the official influences of the government at Washington, to say nothing of unlimited money. But they have truth and right on their side. The facts and figures of a decade array themselves in their behalf, and only the money of the monopolists is likely to break the solid array that will be presented at the polls. —N. Y. Daily News.

AN ARCTIC AVALANCHE.

If Hahn's brass band committee will only keep up its present line of work and McKinley and Sherman keep reiterating their present speeches, the democrats need make no further campaign, for the frost that will overtake the republicans will be an Arctic avalanche that will bury McKinley too deep for political resurrection.—Columbus Post.

MODEL BUILDING.

The new Bee building is the most artistic structure in Toledo. It is five stories high and the internal arrangement is absolutely perfect for newspaper work. It will undoubtedly be the finest newspaper office between New York and Chicago and the Bee ranks second to none when it comes to giving its readers the news.—Delphos Courant.

A NEW EPOCH.

Kentucky's new governor starts in with a new epoch in the history of the state. He has a bright future before him. So has the great Commonwealth whose interest he has been called to guard. May the fruition of all bright hopes be even more glorious than governor and people now anticipate.—Cincinnati Post.

MIGHT BE CHEAPER.

There is a proposition to buy the house in which Major McKinley was born in Ohio and preserve it as an historic spot. Perhaps it might be well, however, to postpone its purchase until after the Ohio election. There's just a chance that it might be had for less money then.—Boston Herald.

MILLS IN OHIO.

Roger Q. Mills will take a hand in the Ohio campaign. Mr. Mills has the tariff question at his fingers' ends, and it is a shame that Mr. McKinley's managers have closed the major's mouth on the subject, because Mr. Mills could have so much fun with him.—Wheeling Register.

WILLING TO RISK IT.

The McKinley dodgers in Ohio are trying to keep the tariff issue in the background by bringing the silver question to the front. It is a dangerous fence, but they are willing to risk anything to escape the uncomfortable questions of the Ohio farmers.—Boston Globe.

ITS FULL MEASURE.

The McKinley tariff law having caused good crops at home and bad crops abroad, has only now to set all Europe fighting to accomplish the full measure of the miraculous work of which its eulogists think it capable.—Chicago Times.

HAVING ITS EFFECT.

There is an evident weakening among republican managers as to the McKinley tariff. They are beginning to damn it with faint praise. The appalling increase in business failures throughout the country is having its effect.—Mt. Vernon Banner.

THAT SORT ALL RIGHT.

We cannot have trade reciprocity with Canada, but it is giving us its "boodlers" in exchange for ours. The republican party is not clamoring for protection against this sort of free trade.—St. Louis Republic.

HAS ITS EFFECT.

Major McKinley is eschewing turtle soup. Whenever he eats turtle soup he favors free silver.—The Massillonian.

A PROSPEROUS PLACE.

North Baltimore Growing Out of Its Boots.

A Glimpse at Its Manifold Business Interests.

Street Paving and Other Improvements—Waterworks to be Constructed Soon.

North Baltimore, Sept. 3.—(Special)—The growth of North Baltimore since the discovery of oil and gas in the vicinity has been marvelous, and almost incredulous.

A few years ago it was an unpretentious country village, scattered along the track of the B. & O. railroad, merely a small trading point, and with the muddiest streets in all christendom. To-day it is rapidly merging into a city, with paved streets, both gas and electricity, elegant business blocks, two banks, two newspapers, two railroads, and contemplated water works. All this improvement has been made in a couple of years, and speaks volumes for the enterprise of its citizens.

North Baltimore is surrounded by a large stretch of farm land and to-day the corn crop in that portion of Wood county is the most promising in its history.

The waving fields of green spreading on all sides of the busy little city, the oil derricks raising their heads here and there, and the factory stacks and chimneys explain fully the secret of North Baltimore's more than wonderful prosperity.

Street Paving.

A couple of years ago the main street in North Baltimore was almost impassable, and the side streets utterly so. Now the main street is macadamized, and the other thoroughfares are being paved with fire brick. It is expected by the close of the present year that North Baltimore will have more miles of paved streets than any town in Wood county. The improvements being made are expensive, but will pay in the long run.

Water Works.

At the present time the village council is negotiating with a syndicate for the construction of a system of water works such as the town needs. Water works have become a necessity from a sanitary standpoint. The drainage is very poor, and it is impossible without water to keep the town in a healthy condition in summer. Judge Allen Smalley, of Upper Sandusky, is connected with the syndicate and work will begin in a few days.

Mercantile Interests.

There is no town in Ohio of its size that has more or larger mercantile estabments than North Baltimore, and the manufacturing interests are fully up. One of the largest and most complete of the latter, is the North Baltimore Pressed Brick works, just east of town, which employs a vast number of men. Four glass factories are in operation and a new furniture factory now under way. It will employ from fifty to seventy-five men.

Oil and Gas.

The discovery of oil and gas was a God-send to the place. The gas has kept up well and the prospects are good for a continuance of the supply. The oil interests are rapidly increasing and the farmers in all that section of the county are rapidly becoming wealthy. Their prosperity means prosperity for the town, and this is one of the reasons why North Baltimore is so rapidly outstripping its sister towns.

When the census were taken a year ago the population lacked a few of 3,000, but now the business men claim 4,500 and there is considerable evidence that these figures are not far out of the way.

The construction of the new railroad, now a part of the C., H. & D. system, has been very valuable to the place and its continuation to points further south will be still more beneficial.

One of the signs of prosperity in North Baltimore are the elegant private residences which are being bu lt. Many of them would be creditable to large cities. The lawns are trimmed nicely and a general air of thrift and prosperity pervades the entire place.

Next summer a greater boom is expected and the enterprising citizens are sanguine that their town will soon double in population and wealth.

The street fair which will commence in a few days, and which will be an innovation in this country bids fair to be a success. Farmers will exhibit their products on the streets in front of the business houses and the premiums will be paid by the merchants, who are, of course, mostly benefited. Arrangements have been made for the entertainment of many visitors, and a big time is anticipated.

Both the banks, as well as all the business houses, are enjoying an unusual prosperity, and although the crops have as yet scarcely begun moving, it is indicative of a great business boom when they are fully marketed.

NORTHWESTERN OHIO POINTERS.

T. N. Bierly of Pemberville has senatorial aspirations.

Under the new apportionment Wood county has 30 voting precincts.

Foraker's friends in northwsestern Ohio occasionally bark up the wrong tree. The Wood county republican rumpus is an evidence of this.

Byron R. Dudrow of Fremont, one of the ablest democrats in the northwest, will make a number of speeches in the coming campaign.

The Patrons of Industry in Williams county refuse to affiliate with the peoples' party, but will vote independently and for whom they please.

The campaign in Wood county this year will be interesting. The democracy are out for a victory and will push the fighting all along the line.

Hon. G. M. Saltzgaber of Van Wert was married yesterday to Miss Eliza Little, a most estimable young lady of that place. Gale is out of politics.

Senator John Ryan was at the convention at North Baltimore shaking hands with the boys. The senator has no idea who his running mate will be if he is renominated.

Eb Poe is mixing himself in Wood county politics, and the mixing may be beneficial to the democrats. As a mixer Poe is all right, but he occasionally mixes at the wrong time.

Hon. L. C. Cole, who was chairman of the democratic convention at North Baltimore on Tuesday, makes an excellent presiding officer. The best of order was maintained during the proceedings.

W. T. Hill, auditor of Defiance county, who will retire from office in a few days, has offered $10,000 for a 100-acre farm just east of Defiance, and if he gets it will settle down and become a tiller of the soil.

Doc Norton of Tiffin predicts Campbell's election by a big majority. He asserts that farmers are done with a protection which does not protect them.

Judge Allen Smalley of Upper Sandusky is of the opinion that Gov. Campbell's election is only a matter of majority.

WILL NEVER FORGET.

Whatever good the republican party may have done, posterity will never forget the wicked high tariff it fastened upon the country, shackling our commerce and robbing poor men.—Courier-Journal.

DON'T DO IT.

The fruits of this campaign would yield better results to the republican party, if some one would hypnotize McKinley and the republican press.—Lima Times.

REAL PEOPLE'S PARTY.

The democratic party is the real People's party, and the ticket headed by Governor Campbell is the People's ticket.—Coshocton Democrat.

FLUNKED AGAIN.

The attempt to change issues is a dismal failure. The flunkers have flunked again.—Mansfield Shield and Banner.

ANOTHER CHURCH WEDDING

Miss Nellie Hoskin and Mr. Frank W. Daggett United for Life.

A large assemblage of friends gathered at the Washington Street Congregational church to witness the marriage ceremony of Miss Nellie Hoskin and Mr. Frank W. Daggett last evening.

Promptly at 8 o'clock the bridal party arrived at the church, and to the strains of the wedding march, on the organ, played by Miss Reibel, the bride and groom headed by the four ushers, Walter Hoskins, Frank Crissy, Arthur Daggett and Newell Newton, followed by the bridesmaid and groomsman, Miss Jessie Hoskins, sister of the bride, and Mr. Will Sherman, slowly marched down the left aisle of the church to the altar, where Rev. O. D. Fisher, in a short ceremony, made them man and wife.

The bridal party then returned to the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Hoskin, 934 Oakwood avenue, where a reception was held, which was attended by a large number of guests.

The bride wore a beautiful dress of light, cream-colored material, and carried a boquet of beautiful white roses.

The bridesmaid was dressed in a light blue dress, and carried roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Daggett received many congratulations and beautiful remembrances. They will make their home in Toledo.

STRUCK A SNAP.

Melbourne Has Hypnotized the People.

Rain Furnished to Order in Any Quantity Large or Small.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Sept. 3.—Melbourne had just started in to make some more rain yesterday afternoon when the committee called upon him and begged him to desist. He did so, but agreed to furnish half an inch of precipitation next Sunday. At the suggestion of leading land owners Melbourne will submit a proposition to deliver 18 inches of rain in April, May and June of next year.

LOCAL POLITICS.

Republican caucuses to-morrow night. It is on the program for the fur to fly.

Carl Beckham still sticks to Sherman. "Off with his head" has gone out among the boys.

What's the matter with Henry Spielbusch as a representative of the Germans for representative?

Delegates will have a convenient locality to slake their thirst Saturday. The convention will be held at Druid hall.

Messer's friends rightfully claim that if Griffin is renominated for the third term, a like honor should fall to his lot.

Tom Cook will not make the race for sheriff this fall against Stuart. He will wait until a more propitious time for election.

Elmer Dale, the new government engineer, will be expected to keep the Eighth ward in line. Will he, Mr. Gould?

Hon. C. A. Flickinger is doing some lively hustling these days, and it is possible he may surprise the natives on Saturday.

O. P. Heller, of Whitehouse, wants to be the country nominee for the legislature, and argues that Messer has had his share.

B. O. Manchester expects to tree one of the three nominations for representative at Saturday's convention. There is a shadow of doubt, however.

The coroner fight is a daisy scramble. About a dozen doctors from all parts of the city are in the muddle. Dr. Henzler claims he is the winner.

Jake Romeis will be on hand on Saturday to see that Mr. Sherman does not get everything he wants. He will be ably assisted by Herman Baumbach.

There is a quiet move on the carpet to bring out Mose Math as a dark horse for the legislature in case the fight becomes too exciting. He is for Foraker.

Chairman Bonner has not yet announced the presiding officer for Saturday's convention. The Foraker people will not permit him to run in a cold deck on them.

Candidates are to be compelled to get upon the platform and swear fealty to the nominee of the convention before a ballot is taken. It must be done under present circumstances.

The politicians are endeavoring to coax John Kumler to accept the republican nomination for state senator in this district. The hyperian-curled Seventh warder simply shakes his head.

President W. I. Squire came up from Columbus last evening to manage Mr. Foraker's affairs at the caucuses and convention. Col. Smead, Clarence Brown and other war horses will be given seats on the outer row.

Sheriff Stuart, Commissioner Englehardt, Treasurer Hunter and Infirmary Director Coder will be renominated by acclamnation by the republican convention. But nomination is not re-election by any means.

It is not altogether unlikely that a resolution indorsing Foraker for United States senator may be introduced and passed at Saturday's convention. This will be determined after noses are counted to-morrow night.

The boys are daring Judge Austin, Collector Waldorf and Postmaster Brown, government representatives of Sherman, to show their hand on Friday night and Saturday. They would but for the civil service rules!

Griffin's rallying cry: "Return me to Columbus, and I will be speaker of the house." C. P. may get the nomination, but he has reached the end of his string. Republicans make this declaration more vigorously than democrats.

"Bones" Robinson proposes to make a desperate effort to get a Sherman delegation from the Second ward. If he does not succeed, he will resign as "manager" of the government building. It is a war to the knife with "Bones."

It is said that Joe Bonner would not refuse a nomination for representative as a Sherman man. The only difficulty in the way is that Foraker's friends will see that the ex-governor has the full delegation. No, Joe is not in it this year.

The colored voters of Toledo, it will be found, are not so solidly republican this year as formerly. Their treatment at the hands of the government officer holders is considered very rank, and means will be discovered to show how it is received.

A plan is talked of to give the nomination for outside senator to Capt. Norris, of Wood county, to relieve his injured feelings for the treatment received at the hands of Ben James and others of Wood's republicans. Capt. Norris refuses to be comforted.

Ex-Senator Geyser asks to be vindicated this fall. He thinks, in the light of his past sacrifices, that he ought to have the nomination for the asking. Dr. Rorick, of Fulton, has the indorsement of the county, and Bill will have to come in by the beak way.

Toledo's republican clubs have not been able to secure a quorum at any of their meetings since the campaign began. Even the boasted new and hard workers' club n the Third ward has not been heard of since the officers of the old club were voted out of existence.

Jim Southard has thrown himself into the ring, and will contest for the position of representative. If Jim has not dropped too late, he may break some of the calculations. Mr. Southard will not give out his preference for senator, and this may have a tendency to keep him in private life.

Chris Schneider, of East Toledo, says a farmer should be nominated for the legislature, in order to give the republicans an even chance at winning. Chris is not too modest to state that he is the farmer who ought to be selected. He helped to nominate the great McKinley, being one of the delegates from Lucas county, and he knows of no reason why he cannot have this additional honor. Go in, Chris.

BARBARA MOSS ABROAD.

Some of the "Stock Sights" of Beautiful Paris.

A Preachment for the Blase Traveler.

The Clean, Gay, Wonderful City of To-day, Set Off by Reminiscences of Its Past Evil Days.

Staff Correspondence Toledo Bee:

Gay, beautiful, wicked, wonderful Paris! To appear not to be a trifle bewildered at first sight of its charms would be to dissemble. I envy not the blase traveler to whom all cities are alike and all ordinary people tiresome. I would rather be the novice, to whom unfrequent sights are absorbingly interesting, and whose curiosity and enthusiasm run to the extent of wanting to "tell about it." I think, under certain circumstances, I could appreciate the feelings of the returned voyageur in "The House of Dorothy," who, you remember, was driven to paying a man by the hour, to listen to his travel experiences.

In these days of "personally conducted" excursions all over the world, it is become quite a fad with intellectual Americans to leave the castles, towers, abbeys and churches to the thoughtless rabble, and betake themselves to some out-of-the-way region, delving for treasure, thus depriving themselves of the benefit of volumes of information, the wealth of ages, collected and arranged intelligently, artistically and chronologically—object lessons in history which teach the beholder more in one day by lasting impression than books can be able to do in years.

An illustration in point is the man who does not go to Westminster Abbey or the tower of London because these are "stock sights." He says he doesn't care for them. But one stroll through the tower will teach him more about the armory of the world's warriors from its earliest record to the present time than he can find anywhere else if he search for a hundred years, and a day in the abbey, if that is all he can command, is one day in a lifetime.

What difference if a party of "Cook's school teachers" troop through ahead of him. They do not carry off anything and because they have time to learn so little there will be the more for him to take unto himself.

Doubtless these same teachers and clerks, business men and women with time and means limited, would prefer months of leisure among the art treasures rather than days of haste, but they simply make the best of the opportunity that comes to them.

This little preachment is because some very ungracious remarks about "Cook's school teachers" were heard, and because three days with a Cook party convinced me that with a close limit as to time and pocketbook there is no other way of gaining so much information and accomplishing so extended a tour. It will be a bird's-eye view at best, and to be satisfied with this when no more is to be had is wise—it is also intensely aggravating (rather a paradoxical declaration I have made of that).

It takes a little time to accustom oneself to the moneys of different countries, their customs of travel in cities and on railways, and the ways of their hotels. If this is done for you and well done it is a gain—in time, at least; not much difference in expense. Then it is an advantage to have provided an office where English is spoken, checks cashed, and the traveler's wants receive attention, in all the large cities. I found it so in Paris; I left my cheque book with letter of identification and all things necessary for any woman to take, copy signature and obtain cash for cheques) at the cashier's counter, and if that officer had not reached out and taken it and kept it for me until I missed and called for it I should have been left without a week's board money in my pocketbook.

This is no advertisement for tourists' agents: I paid schedule price for my rides, but was intended as a rebuke for those who sneer at the ones who must go that way or not at all, especially if they be ladies without escort.

My time in Paris was not limited, but the others of my party were here two weeks ahead of me, and presumably had paid their first visits to the chief places of interest; so this was a good way to "catch up." Then the pleasant people with whom I came over from London had Cook's tickets and I could still be in their company.

I do not wonder that the Parisians looked and smiled at the procession tugging through the streets; five big picnic wagons, carrying twenty or twenty-five each, four or six horses to a wagon, big, gray, stout French horses with strings of bells about their necks, and jolly crowds of Americans and English (chiefly Americans) rattling away in their own language, with all the more abandon that few could understand it.

There were ministers, teachers, professors, quiet matrons, doctors, rollicking maidens, business men and, to the naked eye, a dude or two in our party. With every party of thirty, more or less, a guide is furnished. These are English speaking Frenchmen and generally good talkers. All my days in Paris, during which chosen points of interest were revisited, can not efface the impression of that first three days' glimpse of the city, beautiful. Cool, bright weather, streets so gay with people, buildings light, handsome and airily ornate, the more striking in comparison with somber London, it seemed that we were in the midst of a gala day, a perpetual fete, when, truth told, these were the days following the 14th of July when the city went wild with celebration, and was just recovering.

The first impression of Paris is its brilliancy, because of its light colored building stone, graceful architecture remarkable for elaborate carvings, ancient and modern, its domes, towers and spires, its unrivaled mid-city gardens, its broad streets and avenues and aered open spaces where fountains, monuments and statuary of the highest order of workmanship and the most elaborate design surprise, delight and awe the beholder when the glory of it all first opens on his view. Then above it all bends the tender blue sky of France, which is as volatile and changeful as its people. Sunshine and rain together, rainbow, drifting white clouds and a clear sky, all in a half hour's time.

One who reads at all needs not to be told that the Seine with its palace-lined banks, public bath houses, swimming schools, swift pretty boats, and massive stone bridges is a beautiful river. The child in his primary geography knows it. Then the history that lurks in every wall and tower and column; but for the inscriptions, the printed page and the guide's story it is difficult to realize how little time ago and how many times these clean white streets ran red with blood. We have read and re-read the terrible tales and were obliged to commit and recite them when we were too young and weak to protest. But to be told that the Pont de la Concorde over which we are riding is made from the stones of the old Bastile, and that the spacious Place de la Concorde (strange misnomer) the finest plaza in any city in the world, is the spot where the guillotine began its dreadful work and by its agency 2,800 persons gave up their lives in less than three months time—impresses the history lesson of old, never to be effaced from memory.

When it was proposed to build a fountain on the dreadful spot Chanteaubriand protested that it was too suggestive; and all the waters of the world running for all the years of time to come could not wash away the blood stains. The last struggle which took place here was between the troops of Versailles and the communists in May, 1871.

The place covers an area 200 yards long by 225 wide; its boundaries are eight massive stone figures, representing the chief cities of France: Lille, Strasbourg, Bordeaux, Nantes, Rouen, Brest, Marseilles and Lyons, all executed by famous sculptors. There are two grand fountains with allegories and legends in bronze, pertaining to the Pacific ocean and the Mediterranean sea. The water is thrown twenty-eight feet high and splashing into the marble basins, a white mist rises which veils the entire structure, adding greatly to its beauty in the sunlight, and the sound which is heard squares away is delightful to the senses. Another object of interest is the obelisk of Luxor, of reddish granite 76 feet in height, covered with hieroglyphics which tell all about the Rameses family, the Lord of the Earth and the Sun, etc.

This was a present from Mohammed Ali, viceroy of Egypt, to Louis Philippe in 1831. It cost the French government 2,000,000 francs and five years time to move it from the gates of Luxor, where Sesotris the Great planted it centuries before Christ to place on the Seine where the knife took off the head of Charlotte Corday, three thousand years later. The thought inspires one with something like an awesome respect for the mysterious old monolith, ruthlessly pulled out of Nile sands by the roots and placed on this massive and beautiful rock of Breton marble. If the old stone could have an interval of sentient existence I think it would put up its mouchoir and weep crocodile tears in pity for its left-over self in its awful lonesomeness. But nothing remarkable happened while the tourists made notes and drew deep sighs after their moments of breathless interest.

This is the way it is managed: The wagons are drawn up in clusters sufficiently remote to not interfere; the guide stands with a foot on the wheel-hub of each so as to be impartial (we had 40 persons to one guide) making a sort of Colossus of Roads? of himself, and retails his story at so much a yard, as it were. And really, there is a satisfaction in hearing about a thing while you are looking at it.

From the center of this place we look across the Seine, on the Champs Elysees, down the broad Rue de Rivoli and into the gardens of the Tuileries. We also see the grand old church St. Madeline, the Palace of the Chamber of Deputies, the Louvre and the Arc de Triomphe—a veritable wonderland of garden, and avenue of monumental and architectural beauty. (The palace of the Tuileries, you remember, is entirely demolished and cleared away and no more talk is heard of its re-building.)

A little drive further and we give brief attention to the Column Vendome, 142 feet in height and 43 feet in diameter. It was built by Napoleon I. to commemorate his victories in 1805. Napoleon, in his boundless ambition, designed it to imitate the column of Trajan in Rome. A solid structure of masonry, it is "wound" (that is the look of it) with plate bronze in which is cast scenes from the battles. Some of the figures are three feet in height and are said to be good pictures of famous generals. The metal of which it is made was obtained by the melting of 1,200 cannons captured from the Austrians and Russians. The column was nearly ruined by the Communists in 1871, led by the painter Caurbet. He was sent to prison and his pictures were sold for a good many thousand francs which were expended in restoring the column. A neat illustration of the irony of fate. He died in 1878 and his paintings are in the Luxenbourg.

As we go rolling along the fine pavements, the one observation is made over and over again—the remarkable cleanliness of the streets and their perfect condition. In the first place they are well built, in the next place they are well taken care of. The moment a block of stone or wood settles perceptibly, that moment it is replaced. The pavement is laid with the least incline to the stone gutters on either side, and is swept and washed every day. After the sweeping with brush brooms, which is done by men, women children and machines, as it happens, and because it is done so constantly and so thoroughly, it is not heavy, disagreeable work—after the sweeping and carting away in barrows, then the gutters are flushed from conduits under the sidewalks, and the water pours until it runs as clear as spring water. In fact, perfectly clear water is running in the gutters half the time. Horses and dogs drink it, and I saw a genteel-looking man stoop and wash his hands in it and then wipe them on his kerchief, and a maid from a wine shop came out and rinsed her glasses in it till they were as pure as crystal. And this is not on a few fine avenues and boulevards, but anywhere in the city where we have been it is the same. Indeed, it is a true saying that all the streets of Paris are cleaner than some of the floors.

The rails for its tram cars are sunken to the level of the street, and the flange of the car wheel runs in a groove, instead of the groove in the wheel and the flange on the rail as we construct it. Cabs fly across the street and you never know they pass over a track. Men are kept constantly busy with their narrow long-handled scoops, running them along the grooves to keep them clear of obstruction.

Good, strong, well-conditioned horses are used on all the tram cars and 'buses, but they are shown no mercy. They have to go, up hill and down. The omnibus system forms a network over the city and is said to be the best in the world. It is difficult to get the hang of, but all riding by public conveyance is cheaper than in any other city. A comfortable cab for two, three or four persons will take one anywhere within the city limits for a franc and a half (30 cents), with a few sous for the driver. And the chance is your driver will be in gay livery (they all wear oil cloth plugs) and there will be a gilt splatteration like a coat of arms, or something on the panels of his cab. It is very convenient for the stranger. He can wander about the city and himself, and if he can manage to murder out French enough to tell the cabby where his hotel or pension is, he can settle back and take it easy and be borne speedily to his own door. (Change the gender of the pronoun and you may know how I am so certain of this.)

When the Cook squads visit the churches and galleries they "come down," as the guides say, and march in, each one trying to keep close to the gentleman who knows it all, and two-thirds of them carry pads and pencil in hand. It's nipping work. While you are jotting down one thing he says, two more are getting away. It is better not to try it—trust memory to retain general impressions and write them down in the evening when you return.

The greatest farce in all the hurrying around is the visits to the picture galleries and halls of sculptures and museums. Fountains, gardens, statues, monuments, roads, architecture (except you are a student of its exteriors and general views may be "done" in a round of this kind, but to be told you have only thirty-five minutes for the galleries of the Luxembourg is enough to make one smile or cry as she feels inclined. She may get a glimpse of the gardens and may remember that they are the only remaining Renaissance gardens in Paris, and are modeled after the famous Boboli garden in Florence. She may remember, in a dim sort of way, its long, shaded avenues and its rich flower parterres, its twenty marble women grouped at intervals around the terrace, and, interlocks, its hall of sculpture which she must walk through with scarcely a pause, a conspicuous piece or two, and if she buys a catalogue she will know what famous painters of modern times are honored by a coveted place on the walls.

Such was my first visit to the Luxenbourg. But I have been richly favored. The Toledo artists, Mr. and Mrs. Bateman, with whom I crossed the ocean, have permit to paint in the Luxembourg, the Louvre, and to sketch in the Cluny, and I am privileged to go with them at any time and can have the advantage of their intelligent guidance and criticism. Mrs. Bateman has been industriously at work with her brush every day since she reached Paris, Sundays excepted, and will have some canvasses to bring home with her which French critics have warmly commended. Mr. B. has disposed of a fruit piece which he painted from nature and it is well hung in a pretty hotel salon.

There are hundreds of American art students in Paris—and this part of the city, the Latin quarter, is where they most do congregate. Just now they are in the country, many of them, making sketches. But student life in Paris is a chapter, or a volume by itself. Many a romance has been founded on it and how near the pen of fiction has traced along the line of truth is not realized until one gets into the atmosphere of it.

The Palace of Luxembourg was built in the early part of the 17th century for Marie de Medicis and is said to resemble the ancestral home of its first mistress, in Florence. It was enlarged and beautified by Napoleon I. It has been a royal residence, a state prison, again a royal residence, then a government building in which was established the chamber of peers (under Louis Phillipe) and the seat of senate during the second empire. Then it was used for city business, after the destruction of Hotel de Ville by the Communists, and is now the gallery described, and contains besides the senate chamber, committee rooms, president's room, library and hall of sciences. The present refreshment room was the apartment of Napoleon I and the paintings on the walls are as he caused them to be placed. The chamber of Marie de Medicis may be seen as also the richly decorated chapel. The president of the senate resides in one wing—grand old place for a home.

The Luxembourg gallery is intended for the works of living artists. About ten years after their death the pieces by the best masters are transferred to the Louvre.

Here we got the first glimpse of the work of Marie Bashkirtseff—a meeting of the street boys at a corner with high board fence, above which shows tops of buildings, for background. The picture is somber tinted, and the grays and browns show fine sense of color-harmony, the figures are good and the faces expressionful. The French wonder that Americans look at her work and ask why they came to go to her studio (which is open to visitors for a franc fee). They sniff at her book, say it was doctored, and that she was older than was given to the world anyway when she wrote it and when she died. But the fact remains there was fire of genius in her brain and fingers and her little studio awakens a pathetic interest.

A smile comes to the American who gazes at "The Poor Fisherman" and remembers how the "Innocent Abroad" argued that the baby asleep on the shore with its distressed face and the father in the boat with an equally painful countenance and his hands clasped on his collapsed stomach had been eating some of the weeds which had power to be poisonous and the frantic mother, clawing around on the hillside, was seeking an antidote. It was ungracious, but the piece gives provocation.

A memory of Jules Breton's gleaners, and peasant fields and figures, of Rosa Bonheur's cattle, plowing, in Nivernais, of Bouguereau's nude figures and of Jules Lefebre's "Truth," I carried away with me.

From the Luxembourg to the Louvre, the way the immortal artists go, is natural. Forty-eight acres of ground are covered by the palace and gardens of the Louvre and the Tuileries, it is the most splendid public building in Paris and one of the greatest art treasuries in the world. The whole country has paid tribute to it from its early history in the way of contributed art-wealth and by taxation. The French monarchs have been wonderful builders of palaces, public buildings and superb roads. The peasant's hovel in Brittany may have the earth for a floor, but the roadway past it will be a well-paved one, kept clean and in condition. The government builds and manages these. But of this more another time.

It takes two hours of steady walking with no intervals for rest or study to go through the galleries of the Louvre. Like all historic buildings of France, it it not only great in itself and in present-day sunlight—but it has an ancestry. You recall the story of its naming: An ancient hunting chateau in the midst of a forest infested with wolves was the first building erected on the site. Here the French king, Philip Augustus, was miraculously saved from a ferocious wolf and here he builded the first palace and named it, in commemoration of the event, the Louvre from "Louverie," the wolf-infested forest. This was late in the 12th century.

The present palace was founded by Francis I in 1540 and from that day to the present every ruler of France has added to, elaborated and beautified the place. The Medicis, the Henri's, the Louis's, the Napoleons and the republics are all represented. The palace is built around three sides of courts, squares and gardens, a space as long again as it is broad, and on the fourth side to complete the quadrangle was the palace of the Tuileries. The splendor of the place can scarcely be described or recognized. The pink tint in the map of it, which stands for the work of Napoleon III, is more than all the rest.

In the older part of the palace took place the marriage of Princess Margaret and Henry of Navarre, he of the "white plume" in the pages of romance-history, afterwards king of France. Here was given the signal for the massacre of the Huguenots on that dreadful night of August 24. A fine statue of Coligny, the first victim of the St. Bartholomew slaughter, adorns the entrance of a Protestant church not far away.

The palatial days of the first Napoleon the entire palace underwent repairs and restoration, and Napoleon, the nephew, expended seventy-five millons francs on it, completing the work in 1857. A pal

MY SWEETHEART.

Whenever I play on the old guitar
The songs that my sweetheart taught me,
My thoughts go back to the summer time
When first in her toils she caught me;
And once again I can hear the sound
Of her gleeful voice blown over
The meadow, sweet with the scent of thyme,
And pink with the bloom of clover.

The faded ribbon is hanging still
Where her dimpled fingers tied it—
I used to envy it stealing round
Her neck, for she did not chide it;
And the inlaid pearl that her ringlets touched
As she leaned above it lightly
Glows even now with a hint of gold
That it once reflected brightly.

Whether her eyes were blue as the skies
On a noon-day in September,
Or brown like those of a startled fawn,
I can't for the world remember;
But when she lifted them up to mine
I know that my young heart tingled
In time to the tender tune she sang
And the airy chords she jingled.

Yet now, though I sweep the dusty strings
By her girlish spirit haunted,
Till out of the old guitar there trips
A melody, blithe, enchanted,
My pulses keep on their even way
And my heart has ceased its dancing,
For somebody else sits under the spell
Of the songs and sidelong glancing.

A comprehensive study of the influence of forests on the daily variation of the temperature in Germany and Austria shows that the absolute value of the influence in woods of a given kind of tree is affected by the degree of density of the wood, being higher the denser the wood. A rose-colored lake is one of the attractions in the Caspian sea. One lake is covered with salt crystals strong enough to allow man and beast to cross the lake on foot; another is as round as any circle and of a lovely rose color. Its banks of salt crystals form a setting white as driven snow, to the water, which not only shows all the colors from violet to rosy-red, but from which rises a perfume as of violets. Both the perfume and the coloring are the result of the presence of sea weeds, the violet polycystis violacea and the pink cialbrocystis rosea persicina.

In tearing down the Merchants' hotel in Cortlandt street, New York, it was discovered that the flag staff on the roof extended to the ground through the five stories of the structure. The original building, which was erected in 1802, had stood back from the street, and when, in 1828, it was made into a hotel fronting on the street line, the lofty flag pole was left standing, and the front wall was built around it. The pole was found to be in an excellent state of preservation and was carefully taken down by the contractor and removed to his place of business, despite offers to purchase it as a souvenir.

A use has been found for the Sudan. In addition to unlimited quantities of sand the country produces numberless quails, which are imported to London via Egypt, and ultimately find their way to English tables. Never before have so many quails been sold in the metropolitan markets as this season, and never within the memory of dealers has the price been so low. The quail of the desert is also put to another use. It is exceptionally rapid in flight and strong on the wing, and is beginning to be much used in shooting matches. Quails for this purpose are carefully brought over alive, and give, it is said, excellent sport.

One of the peculiarities of the telegraph business is illustrated by a portfolio in the possession of Mr. George Ryley, superintendent of construction of the Western Union company. It is made up of facsimiles of all the telegraph poles in the sixth district, which comprises the states of New Jersey, Maryland and that portion of Pennsylvania east of the Alleghany mountains. Each pole is perfectly reproduced in pen and ink, showing the number of cross bars, together with the different wires attached, each of which is numbered. When there is trouble with any of the wires in the district, it is an easy matter for Mr. Ryley to direct a lineman to the spot in need of repair in a very short space of time.

A number of persons living in the vicinity of Reedly, Fresno county, Cal., all reputable citizens, declare that they have seen and hunted two dragons with wings 15 feet long, bodies without covering of hair or feathers, head broad, bills long and wide, eyes not less than four inches in diameter, and with feet like those of an alligator, though more circular in form. They had five toes on each foot, with a strong claw on each toe, and the track is 11 inches wide and 19 inches long. These monsters were first seen near Selma, Cal., on the night of July 11. After they had made several appearances a party was organized to hunt them. One of them was wounded and tracked several miles, and his track in the mud secured.

COMMISSIONER STAGER

Does a Little Catechizing Last Night

At the Session of the Police Board,

Showing That There Has Been Double Dealing With Regard to the Saloon Closing Question.

The board of police commissioners had a lively discussion last evening over the Sunday saloon question and the unwarranted attacks that have been recently made on the chief of police. The real parties who are to blame were shown up in a very unenviable light. Some wholesome truths were brought out, and Mayor Emmick, Judge Sala and Prosecutor Wheeler all came in for a roasting.

The members of the board were indignant at the wrongs done the chief, and did not hesitate to declare themselves emphatically. They did not speak of his maligners in very choice terms, and Mayor Emmick was obliged to preside over a meeting, the members of which were sending many pointed shafts at him.

After the regular business of the session, Commissioner Stager opened the ball by asking if he could ask Chief O'Dwyer a few questions regarding the closing of the saloons on Sunday.

"Of course you can, Mr. Stager," said the mayor. "That's what we are here for—to discuss just such things."

Mr. Stager's first question then was: "Chief O'Dwyer, I would like to know if after the famous secret meeting of this board on May 22, you received any orders, either express or implied, to be lenient with the Sunday closing law?"

"I received what were implied orders not to be too severe," answered the chief.

"What did you understand from the meeting of this full board at that time?"

"I understood that they wanted the law strictly enforced."

"How long after that board meeting did you receive these implied instructions?"

"About a week or two afterwards."

"Now, chief, where did the implied orders to be lenient come from?"

"Several men from the outside called on me in regard to this matter."

"But, Mr. O'Dwyer, I want to know what member of this board gave you any such instructions."

"Mayor Emmick and Commissioner Kruse were there at the time the other gentlemen came to see me."

Mr. Stager again asked who requested him to be lenient with the saloons.

"No one came right out and made such a request," said the chief, "but from the conversation I inferred that I was not to be too severe."

"The reason I asked these questions was because of the dirty, nasty attacks that have been made against Chief O'Dwyer by the Blade and others, and the reading of curtain lectures to this board by that paper. I have gotten tired of this thing, and it is about time the right parties were being shown up. I don't see what is the use of our holding executive sessions and giving the chief orders, when other members of the board go on the quiet and request him not to be too severe. I want to know if this is the way this thing is to be done.

"As I remarked before, the Blade has been barking up the wrong tree, and with this kind of work going on the chief is left between two fires and being blamed by both sides. This is not the proper way to do business, and I am tired of being roasted by both sides. I would like to know the sense of this board as to the proper way to issue orders."

Mr. Waring—"All orders that the chief receives from this board should be enforced to the letter."

Mr. Potter—"I think the Blade had a little bile that they wanted to get rid of, but now that the people have found them out they have changed their course. The chief is doing the very best that can be done, but what good does it do to bring people in here and let the prosecutor and judge release them. Let the right parties get the blame."

During all this time the mayor had not said a word, although several times the members had paused to give him a chance. This time he could not get out of it and he tried to hedge. "Until the jury system had been attacked," said he, "there had been no trouble in enforcing the laws. I know personally that the chief receives reports of saloons open on Sunday and turns them over to the prosecutor. It is true that I did happen in at the police station on the afternoon referred to when some gentlemen were discussing the Sunday saloon matter with the chief, but I told him then, and have done so several other times, that he is chief of police, and in whatever he does the mayor and police board will stand by him. I want the people to understand that the chief, the mayor and police board are willing to do their duty."

Mr. Stager still insisted on knowing whether the chief was to go by orders of the board or private requests and asked the question several times, but received no answer.

Mr. Waring—"As to the jury question I should think Judge Sala's decision should also apply to these houses of ill-fame, but I don't think Judge Sala is the supreme court."

Mr. Stager—"In speaking to me about that matter Judge Pugsley said that question was for a court even higher than the common pleas, but Judge Sala don't seem to think so. If it is the sense of this board that the saloons are to be closed on Sunday it ought to be done. It looks as though Sala and Wheeler were on to the fact that they were to be shown up and they have issued a few warrants for saloon keepers who were open last Sunday. I have no doubt but that the chief stands ready to carry out the orders of this board, but he can not very well do it if he gets two sets of instructions. Again, I would like to know what he is to do." This was directed to the mayor, but the only answer was another oppressive silence.

"I would also like to call attention to the fact," continued Mr. Stager, "that the negligence and apparent incompetency of the police prosecutor has stood in the way of making many cases, and so the chief gets the blame for not closing the saloons on Sunday."

Another silence of several minutes followed this, and was broken only by an adjournment.

NOTORIOUS CLINTON PRISON.

The Investigation Has Been Placed on Foot.

The State of New York Will Look Into the Serious Charges Made by the Press.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 3.—The commission appointed to investigate the charges in the public press against the officials of Clinton prison met at the office of the superintendent of prisons to-day and the following course of procedure was decided upon:

No permission will be given to either accused or accusers to be represented by counsel. Mr. Craig, the president of the state board of charities, is a lawyer and can ask all the necessary questions in proper legal form. The hearing will not be open to the public, but all the testimony will be taken by a stenographer and at the conclusion of the hearing all the evidence, as well as the report of the commission, will be given to the press.

The commission will determine from time to time, as the hearing progresses, what measures shall be taken for the protection of witnesses who may be sworn. The superintendent will adopt whatever course in that regard that the commission decides is proper or necessary. The commission invites all persons having any knowledge of facts bearing on the merits of the matters to appear before the commission at Clinton prison without delay.

Enter Upon the Work of the Campaign with Vigor.

An interesting meeting of the Seventh Ward Democratic club was held last evening, with President Kirschner in the chair. The temporary quarters, near the corner of Franklin avenue and Bancroft street, were secured for permanent headquarters, and the preliminary work of precinct organization was discussed.

It is proposed to have each precinct thoroughly canvassed to the end that every democrat in the ward is voted.

The meeting next week will be held on Thursday evening and it is desirous of having every precinct fully represented so that the work may progress without delay.

New members were admitted as follows: C. H. Lemmon, George W. Armstrong, Elmer White, S. C. King, Mat. Thies, Barney Bruenning.

ARE ON THEIR TRAIL.

Bloodhounds After the Train Robbers.

Reported That They Secured Twelve Thousand Dollars in Their Haul.

Denver, Col., Sept. 3.—It is now stated that the Rio Grade train robbers secured $12,000 from the express car instead of $3,000 as reported yesterday. All telegraph wires between Contapaxi and Pueblo were cut, it is supposed by the robbers who expect to gain time by this move. As soon as the bloodhounds were taken to the place of the robbery yesterday they struck the trail and when last heard of were going toward Wet mountain. All the mountain passes are being guarded and now there is every probability that the robbers will be speedily captured.

MEAT INSPECTOR.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Secretary Rusk has returned to Washington. He said today that the plan of beef and pork inspection which has been inaugurated in the west is proving a great success. "Beef is thoroughly inspected at Chicago by the department," said Mr. Rusk, "a post-mortem, as it were, being held on each animal. At Chicago also the arrangements for inspection have been so systematized that already the shippers are in condition to send abroad 1,200 hogs a day. While I was west I also organized a pork inspection station at Milwaukee. The department has received applications for stations from Kansas City and Omaha."

AT A FARMER PICNIC.

A Good Old-Fashioned Time in Auglaize.

The Knights of the Plow Turn Out and Devote a Day to Pleasure.

Wapakoneta, Sept. 3.—An immense crowd of farmers, their wives and children, attended the farmers' picnic at the fair grounds yesterday.

The procession formed about 11 o'clock just east of the railroad and proceeded west down Auglaize street. It was headed by a Lima colored glee club. Next came the marshals and the Uniopolis band, followed by the speakers and reception committee in a crowded carriage.

An immense wagon, filled with ladies and children gaily bedecked with colors and carrying a banner inscribed "Dry Run lodge 1890, F. M. B. A.," preceded the farmers in all sorts of conveyances and was the feature of the parade. In nearly all of the vehicles a small jag of hay was tied on in some convenient place. This, with other semblances of old-time political gatherings, except the more modern vehicles in use, gave the procession much of the appearance it would have had had it gone down street in the forties or sixties.

It was a beautiful day and the fair ground offered its shade and other conveniences for the comfort and entertainment of man and beast. Everybody ate his dinner from his own basket, and it looked very much like an old political gathering except that there was no whisky, and consequently no disorder and no fights. This may also have had something to do with the suppression of the enthusiasm which used to characterize such gatherings and of which there did not seem to be very much on tap, although the speeches and music seemed to be fully appreciated.

Hon. John Seitz, the People's candidate for governor, was the principal speaker, and he confined himself to a review of our financial history and an argument in favor of free and unlimited coinage of silver.

Mrs. Diggs, of Kansas, who has been all through the alliance campaigns in that state, was present and sustained herself as an interesting, energetic and eloquent little woman. She scored the McKinley bill and the major's tin infant industry in a way that would have made glad the heart of any tariff reformer.

Mr. Charles Jenkens, the state organizer of the Farmers' alliance, was the last speaker and confined himself to a rattling discussion of the general evils of the farmer. He is a sharp, incisive and interesting speaker and can make as much fun for a crowd as a box of monkeys.

The colored glee club and band furnished the music.

Those unhappy persons who suffer from nervousness and dyspepsia should use Carter's Little Nerve Pills, which are made expressly for sleepless, nervous, dyspeptic sufferers. Price 25 cents.

REAL ESTATE MARKET.

Business Looking Up, But Still Quiet.

Considerable Inquiry During Last Week.

The Question of Annexation Causing Discussion—The Armour Building—Building Notes.

The movement in real estate this week has been livelier than anytime since the market quieted down after the spring rush.

Considerable inside property changed hands, which is the kind of business that dealers desire to handle.

Inquiry has livened up, and dealers report it quite animated, which is a favorable indication.

Foreign parties are looking after Toledo real estate, as a means of investing spare capital. They claim that it is almost as sure an investment as government bonds. It is sure to advance, but never declines.

Slow But Sure.

"There is nothing boomish in Toledo real estate," remarked E. O. King, "and it is all the better for the welfare of the city and her citizens that there isn't. A man can't buy a lot one day and sell it the next and double his money on it. A town or city where such deals are made don't last very long. It is like blowing up a rubber balloon, and then sticking a pin into it. Some of these western towns are fair samples of what a boom will do for a place. A majority of them fall flatter than the rubber balloon after the speculators get through. There has been plenty of money made in Toledo real estate, and the opportunity to make more is just as apparent as ever, but if a man goes into the business thinking he is going to make a fortune in a few months he will be wiser at the end of a year. There is one thing, however, when Toledo real estate advances, it advances for keeps. If a man buys a piece of property, and handles it carefully he can't lose on it, for Toledo is moving ahead, slow but sure. A man is safe to invest his money in real estate in Toledo, as he can go to bed at night without fear that he will wake up in the morning and find that his property had dropped off the earth."

About Annexation.

"I am in favor of taking it in," remarked A. K. Detwiler, while in conversation with a Bee on the subject of annexation. "We have considerable property that will be included, but that makes no difference to me; in fact, I would be glad of it. Under the existing circumstances it is simply impossible to procure any improvements. Of course the property is not taxed for this purpose, not being in the municipality, hence no municipal improvements could be expected. The property will never amount to anywhere near its worth unless it is annexed to the city. The only objection I entertain in the matter is that it brings so much vacant property within the city lines, and we have more now than we should have. But let her go; we will take our chances with the others."

"How soon will the committee on annexation make a report?" inquired a Bee of Alderman Potter, who is a member of that committee.

"That is rather indefinite. It is an important undertaking, and one that requires careful investigation and conservative consideration."

"How do the property owners outside view the project?"

"I couldn't say as to that, as I haven't had any conversation with any of them myself, and the committee has not progressed that far in the investigation. So far as I am posted on the situation, I see no reason why the property owners should object to being annexed to the city, as the suburbs will never amount to anything until they are, and it will be simply impossible for them to procure any improvements, such as sidewalks or sewerage. They receive police protection and fire protection to a certain extent, and don't pay a cent for it. We need more fire apparatus, and if Auburndale and West Toledo were taken in a department could then be located at these points, which would afford ample fire protection. Then in case of a big fire, when all the apparatus in the city would be in service, the apparatus at these points could come in and be ready for a second fire."

The Corn City Association.

The Corn City Building and Loan association, which was organized some time ago, is pushing to the front in a most approved manner.

At the last meeting eight new members were taken in and 10 shares of stock subscribed. The receipts reach a good round sum each week, and already several good big loans have been made.

The constitution and by-laws, including explanations as to the methods and purposes of the association, in neatly printed form, have just been received from the printer.

The association bears the distinction of having enrolled as members ex-President R. B. Hayes and son B. A. Hayes. The latter is in the directory as a member of the appraising committee.

Not So Dull After All.

"It has apparently been a very dull summer in real estate," said Irving B. Hiett to a Bee, "but our books show a decided increase for the months of July and August, compared with the same period last year. We have had a good demand for Parkwood, Robinwood and Scottwood avenue property, and the movement has been quite active. In my opinion the summer season was better as a summer season than the spring as a spring season. Money is easing up a little, and business generally is improving."

Seventh Ward Improvements.

Within the last two years Toledo has taken gigantic strides in growth and improvement, but of all favored localities the Seventh ward certainly came in for more than its share, and Robinwood is the fortunate thoroughfare of that locality.

William H. Boos is building two splendid residences that will be an ornament to the city.

E. O. Paddock has broken ground for an elegant dwelling that will cost $14,000. Mrs. Ayres, J. E. Parsons, City Solicitor Read, B. G. Mechen, Clifford Lamb and others have residences under way.

The Armour Building.

Before snow flies another solid, substantial structure will be added to Toledo's many fine business blocks. It will be the Armour warehouse, excavation for the foundation of which is under way at present, under the contract of Casper Sacks, of this city. The building will be an elegant structure, 100 feet long and 45 feet wide, with dressed stone finishing.

Building Points.

Jacob Hartman is preparing to build two cottages.

The Kline block on Adams street is about completed.

The Walbridge office building is to be a grand structure.

Christ. Bensman is building a $700 cottage on Brown road.

John Stalbaum has just completed a $1,000 cottage on Baker street.

Margaret C. Licklider is building a $900 cottage on Yondota street, East Toledo.

Fredricka Zeim is building a $900 cottage on Washington street near Wells.

Building permits were issued one day this week aggregating a valuation of over $50,000.

The Wade building on the corner of Jefferson and St. Clair street will soon be ready for occupancy.

Joseph M. Wickert is putting up a fine building on the corner of Elm and Page streets, to cost $3,000.

R. P. Platt is preparing to build a fine residence on Maplewood avenue that will cost $2,500 when completed.

Lincoln Smith is preparing to build a store room on Western avenue, Air Line Junction, that will cost $2,500.

J. B. Caldwell is building a residence on Rosewood avenue between Virginia street and Detroit avenue, to cost $1,600.

POLICE COMMISSIONERS.

Report of an Interesting Meeting Last Evening.

A Question of Veracity Between A. E. Lang and Sergeant Scott—Dr. Fisher Makes Some Suggestions.

At the meeting of the police board last evening all members were present, but the amount of business transacted was not large. Several interesting matters came up, however, besides the hot discussion of the Sunday saloon question.

Health officer Fisher presented his report on the health of the city for August as follows:

|---|---|
| Class 1—Zymotic | 30 |
| Class 2—Constitutional | 15 |
| Class 3—Local | 65 |
| Class 4—Developmental | 6 |
| Class 6—Violence | 9 |
| Total | 125 |
| Sex—Male | 66 |
| Female | 59 |
| Social conditions—Married | 34 |
| Single | 72 |
| Widowed | 16 |
| Not stated | 3 |

Nativity—Toledo, 47; Ohio, 10; United States, 30; foreign, 38.

Annual ratio per 1,000, 18.14.

Dr. Fisher also stated that in the alleys in the business part of the city there was a large amount of refuse detrimental to health besides that which the garbage contractor is obliged to collect, and he considered that these alleys should be cleaned every day by the health department as well. If this department had two wagons and teams they could do it.

He also recommended that the board request the council to pass an ordinance prohibiting teams from being driven faster than a walk on Summit street, and also to keep loaded wagons off Summit street as much as possible.

D. J. O'Hara, the garbage contractor, who was present, stated that he cleaned the alleys in the business part of the city three times per week, some of them four times, and he cleaned the alley between Summit and St. Clair every day.

The chief's report was read and filed, and the bills for the month were approved.

Charges were preferred against Patrolman Ed McGarry for being helplessly drunk on the morning of August 22 while off duty. He was ordered to appear.

Commissioner Stager presented a communication and afterwards signed it himself, making charges against Patrolman Moses Powder of numerous dereliction of duty, such as drinking beer at a dance on the corner of Canton avenue and Stovepipe alley, drinking in several saloons, and stating that at a wedding on his beat he went in and stayed an hour and a half, much to the disgust of guests. He was also ordered to appear for trial.

A communication was read from the city clerk, stating that the council passed an ordinance requesting the police board to enforce the laws for correct weights and measures on the market.

This called forth a brief discussion, but nothing was done.

At the request of the Toledo & Ohio Central railway special police powers were granted to Forest Fordham, the special officer of the company.

The communication previously made by A. E. Lang, charging that Sergeant Scott and a squad of police did not protect the property of the Consolidated Street Railway company one morning during the strike at the lower Summit barns was brought up. This communication stated that when Mr. Lang arrived at the barns that morning Sergeant Scott had his men drawn up in line, and a few minutes afterwards the strikers turned the cars across the tracks and the police did not interfere. Mr. Lang wanted to know if the police were only to protect persons and not property.

Mr. Lang was present at the meeting, and Sergeant Scott was called up, and upon being shown the letter, stated at once and emphatically that it was false in every particular and he could make an explanation and produce witnesses.

Some discussion occurred as to what should be done in the matter, and it was finally decided to have the sergeant present his side.

Mr. Scott then stated that he went down to the lower Summit barns with 10 men in the patrol wagon. At the corner of Stickney avenue the officers got out and marched the balance of the distance to the barn. Before they arrived the strikers saw them coming and turned the cars across the tracks. When the police arrived Mr. Lang was already there and everything was quiet. He told the strikers that he was there to protect property and that they should not touch any cars again. Mr. Lang then wanted to know if he was not going to run cars out and he said he was not there for that purpose. Lang then drove off and returned with the mayor.

Mr. Lang then made a statement and insisted that what he said in his letter was true, that he did not arrive until after the police and that the strikers turned the cars while the police were there.

Superintendent Denman made the same statement.

As it was a question of veracity between Mr. Lang and the sergeant the matter was continued until the next meeting when both sides will appear with their witnesses and the board will try the case.

This ended the business of the meeting and was followed by the exciting discussion on the Sunday saloons detailed in another column.

EXPOSITION NOTES.

Large entries of fruits and vegetables are coming in very fast.

The ladies of Toledo are making a great many entries of fancy work.

The superintendent is busy to-day assigning places to the large exhibits of machinery which have commenced to arrive.

A large number of extra stalls have to be put up to make room for the unusually large number of entries of live stock that have been entered.

Every department of the exposition is being well filled, and some are larger than ever before. Many fine exhibits have been sent in from all parts of the country.

S. E. Hurst, of Elyria, one of the largest fancy poultry growers in the state, and just from the Detroit exposition, has made a very large entry of poultry and fancy game birds.

RIOT IS STILL RAMPANT

In the Streets of the Town of Coronel.

Troops of the Late Balmaceda Government

Disband and Shoot to Death the Officers—The Town Sacked and the Women Outraged.

Valparaiso, Chili, Sept. 3.—Exciting news is brought from the south by the straits steamer, which came up from Talcahuano.

The two regiments of government troops, which were taken to that port recently from Coquimbo by the transport Imperiale, revolted when they heard of the defeat of the Balmacedists at Placilla last Friday.

They shot to death all of their officers and disbanded.

Nearly four thousand coal miners joined them and together they have practically taken possession of the town of Coronel, on the coast about 25 miles south of Concepcion.

All sorts of excesses have been committed by them. Houses and stores have been sacked and burned. The slightest protest against their actions is met by rifle shots.

Women have been abused and subjected to brutalities of the most revolting character. In fact mob rule in its worst form prevails.

Some outrages have been committed also in Concepcion and Talcahuano, but the force at the disposal of the authorities there has been sufficient to save them from the fate which has overtaken the 6,000 people of Coronel.

As soon as the news was received here the German warship Sophie and the British gunboat Daphne were ordered to go at once to Coronel and protect the interests of foreign residents there. The government officials here have also taken steps to beat the mob into subjection.

Senor Jorge Monti, Gen. Canto and others of the congressional chiefs have arrived in Santiago. They were received with the greatest enthusiasm by the people of the capital. Gen. Baquedano, the acting president, received them officially. The other members of the junta de Gobierno are expected to arrive here from Iquique later. They will at once proceed to Santiago, when the question of a new election and the organization of the government will be considered.

There is no disguising the fact that there is a very bitter feeling against the Americans on the part of the successful revolutionists. This feeling is so strong that unless it is placated in some way it may seriously affect American commercial interests for some time.

The capture of the Itata first created the impression that the United States government was actively unfavorable to the revolutionary cause. This impression was intensified by the action of Admiral Brown when he visited Quintero bay on August 20 to witness the landing of General Canto's army.

The admiral desired to see the maneuver, and invited some of the other naval officers in Valparaiso to come to the flag ship San Francisco and go to Quintero bay. Only the German officers accepted. The San Francisco did not anchor at Quintero bay, but steamed around until the landing was effected and then headed for Valparaiso. A boat was sent from the transport Copiapo to visit the American cruiser, but did not succeed in getting aboard. Upon the arrival of the San Francisco here Lieutenant Dyer visited Intendente Viele to secure permission to send a cable dispatch to the navy department.

This visit has been construed by the adherents of the junta as proof positive that Admiral Brown was acting as a government spy on the movements of the opposition, and no amount of explanation has been sufficient to remove this impression.

Then other things have served to strengthen the feeling against the United States. Not the least important among them is the very general belief that Minister Egan has been an active partisan of Balmaceda and has used his influence in preventing the state department from recognizing the belligerent rights of the insurgents.

Acting Secretary of State Wharton's action in ignoring Senors Mott and Foster, the congressional envoys, even now when it is a recognized fact that they represent the only government of the country, has increased the feeling against citizens of the United States. Admiral Brown's action in refusing to give up the political refugees who have found an asylum aboard his ships has also added to the general irritation. It is the general belief that Admiral Brown is acting under instructions or by the advice of Mr. Egan.

The German admiral settled the question as to the disposition of the refugees so far as he is concerned by sending the corvette Alexandrine to the north to-day, presumably to Callao, with Senor Claudio Vicuna, the recent president-elect, Admiral Oscar Viel, the ex-intendente of Valparaiso, Captain Fuentes, recently in command of the torpedo boat Almirante Lynch, Senor Sanchez, late superintendent of the custom house, and others aboard.

Mr. McCreary, the United States consul at Valparaiso, is in high favor. He rendered valuable services to persecuted women and political refugees whose lives were in danger.

The records at Santiago confirm the statement that on August 18 President Balmaceda ordered 32 young men to be shot to death. They were charged with having engaged in a plot to blow up railroad bridges, and thus prevent the movement of government troops.

Many of them were mere boys from sixteen to eighteen years of age. One of them was whipped in order to make him confess the plot. It is charged, and from the records it appears to be true, that only a small portion of the cruelties perpetrated by the late government have been published. The congressionalists are giving trials to all against whom offenses are charged, and executions up to this time have been remarkably few.

Much pity is felt for the families of the Balmacedist officials who have fled the country. Many of them have been left behind, friendless and penniless.

PREPARING FOR DEFEAT.

Mr. Sherman admits that owing to the silver and tariff questions that there is an element of uncertainty in the result of the election in Ohio this fall. When asked what he would do as Sherman talks that way in advance of an election, it looks very much like he was preparing excuses for the defeat that he sees staring his party in the face in Ohio.—Holmes County Farmer.

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. How Does This Style Strike You?

It is still the same old story. We want you to live in your own home. Can't do it, you say? Of course you can. Haven't the ready money? That's all right. Ready money is always scarce except among the capitalists. The man who originated selling land and other property on easy terms deserves to be rich and merits the gratitude of every man and woman of family.

The plan of owning his own home stimulates a man and gives him courage to struggle harder for his rights, and this idea has not only encompassed the laboring class, but has reached the laboring man and the lawyer. The man of yesterday, who never thought of owning a home of his own, is to-day seriously considering buying land on the installment plan and to have his rent go over into principal. To such as these Offers the most and best advantages of any addition in Toledo. One hundred and sixty acres of land, bounded by Monroe street, Bancroft street, Detroit avenue, Oakwood and Lawrence avenues, situated on both the Robison and Consolidated Street Railways, but a few minutes' walk or ride from the heart of the city, with wide, well shaded and paved streets, large lots, natural and artificial drainage, beautiful homes and the best of neighbors, cheap prices and your own terms—this is ENGLEWOOD. Is it any wonder that it is the Home Center? Is it any wonder that there are many homes even more beautiful than the one above, and many more soon to be erected?

To buy property—that's intuitive sense; to buy property that will increase in value—that's economical sense; to buy in Englewood—that's dollars and cents.

BIRDS OF THE SEA.

Queer Things About Their Habits and Homes.

Some Islands Covered With Them a Nesting Time—The Moddy, the Tern, the Pelican and the Penguin.

The birds of the ocean, the tireless flyers, long of wing and light of body, the gulls, petrels and their giant allies, the albatrosses, have always been associated with the romance and atmosphere of mystery that surrounds ocean life, says the San Francisco Chronicle. The appearance of the albatross at sea, its silent flight, its sombre garb, its complete indifference to the terrors of wind and wave, act strongly upon the imagination of the toilers of the sea. So with the petrel, that defies the storm and gayly trips a measure to the howling gale. It is sacred, and its destruction considered ominous of dire calamity.

The gulls constitute the feathered ornaments of our harbors and shores, their singularly graceful flight, long, slender wings and striking contrasts in black and white rendering them particularly attractive. On the rarl portions of the Atlantic and Pacific coasts their breeding places are found; but it is in the south, in isolated regions, that they are seen to the best advantage and in greatest numbers. Those who are familiar with an occasional white-winged form flashing over the waters of the harbor or bay form but little conception of the appearance of these birds en masse in the homes of their choice. On our southern borders of the United States there are several localities famous as bird-collecting places, but none more interesting than Bird Key in the Gulf of Mexico. My first visit to the key was made while examining the wreck of a large ship that had grounded in years before, and was a conspicuous object about two miles from the key, though so eaten by the teredo that it was a literal shell, the animals having invaded the hull and taken possession, depositing their limy secretions, which now formed almost the entire substance of the wood. From the old wreck I noticed a singular dark cloud hanging low over the island, as though some mysterious smoke had risen from their young with sardines and small fry, but for every fish brought there was a score of hangers-on that climbed the airy table of the noddy and presented their claim. The nests of the noddies were on the bushes five or six feet from the ground, fashioned in the most careless manner, being a mere bunch of sticks held together more by chance than anything else. On the top of this perched the egg, not in a depression, but simply held by the irregularity of the twigs. The egg was almost as large as that of a hen, nearly white and very palatable. When a fish was dropped upon the nest by a parent bird the crabs would gather from all quarters—a motley assemblage of hermita, with shells of all kinds, from the pearly trochus to the small trombus, while fierce and combative was the large purple gegarcinus that stole out from under its house beneath a neighboring cactus patch to prey upon the defenseless fledglings.

Four or five mangrove trees in the vicinity of Bird Key were occupied by a colony of brown pelicans. The nests were an enlarged edition of the noddy, a simple mass of refuge, twigs and seaweed and the flotsam and jetsam of the ocean, upon which were perched two large blood-marked eggs. Those who sympathized with the laughing gull as the victim of the frigate or man-of-war bird would hardly do so were they familiar with the vicissitudes of pelican life, as this patient bird, with its solemn, decorous bearing, is a victim to the laughing gull. The laughing gull, being lazy and heavy, labors at a disadvantage in fishing, so prefers to borrow from its companion, the pelican. The operation, which I have often observed, as well as its sequel with the frigate bird, is as follows: The pelican flies along at a distance of about twenty feet from the water, occasionally precipitating itself upon a school of small fry that, not being able to see an object directly overhead, often become victims and are captured by the long bill and pouch. Having caught the sardines the pelican rights itself, and for a second floats serenely upon the surface, wagging its diminutive tail in satisfaction. To swallow the game it tosses its beak upward, which throws the fish from the pouch between the bills, the next movement being to swallow. But here the laughing gull becomes a party to the performance.

He has been a watchful follower for some time, and now alights upon the pelican's head, or sometimes its back, the pelican uttering no protest and apparently not objecting in the least.

CRESTED PENGUIN.

As the tempting morsel is tossed by the pelican the gull leans forward and deftly plucks it from the long bill, and either coolly swallows it then and there while standing upon the broad back of his victim, or flies away with the stolen fish, uttering the victorious "Ha, ha" that may attract the attention of the frigate bird, which in turn proceeds to rob the gull.

It is in the Southern seas, on the borders of the Antarctic Ocean, that the most extraordinary phases of oceanic bird life are found. Here is the home of the penguin, the group representing one of the lowest forms of birds that, so far as appearance go, might well be considered links in grotesque evolutionary chain leading us from fishes to the birds, as when in the water they are to all intents and purposes fishes, using their paddle-like wings as fins which, instead of feathers, appear to be covered with fine scales. In moving along they lie prone, diving from wave to wave like a seal, and might readily be taken for a small cetacean. When leaving the water they scramble or crawl up rocks on the shore in a clumsy manner, then assuming an upright position and an appearance more extraordinary than ever. In many cases they seem to affect strange positions, often standing in lines or marching in columns of four or more in single file to the beach, and in certain large forms creating the impression on distant observers that they are men going through some drill or exercise with the regularity which military discipline demands.

The rookeries of the penguins are of vast extent, especially those of the Island of Tristan de Cunah, one of the so-called inaccessible islands, lying between Cape Horn and the Cape of Good Hope, in the Southern Ocean. The island, as might be expected, is a desolate place, containing about sixteen square miles, nearly circular, with peaks rising to an altitude of 8,300 feet, which are capped with snow nearly the entire year. The locality is cold and barren, yet is the kingdom of the penguins, their cities of millions of inhabitants having been established here for untold centuries.

The rookeries are formed near the water in tracts covered by stout reddish tussock grass (Spartina arundinacea) that grows so coarse and in such solid clumps that it has at its base almost the consistency of a tree. This mass, higher than a man's head, is permeated in every direction by the streets, lanes and avenues of the penguins or rock-hoppers (Endypes saltator). The bird is one of the most singular of its kind, standing about a foot and a half high, covered with a close-fitting set of feathers much resembling those of the grebe. The general color of the back is slate-blue, while the breast is snow-white. From the base of the bills extends backward a mustache-like plume of a rich sulphur-yellow hue, which is held erect when the bird is on land, and by its motions gives it a bright red bill and a richly colored eye, wings like paddles, and we have the curious bird that occupies and holds the greater part of this deserted region.

Several years ago an attempt was made to thoroughly examine and map one of these penguin rookeries—a task not only disagreeable, but absolutely dangerous in some instances, as shown by several fatalities, resulting from the combative and aggressive nature of the birds, that not only did not fear the visitors but resisted their advances all along the line. The party landed on the rocky shore of what appeared to be a street leading up to the tussock rookery. It was about 20 feet wide, and as the boat approached large numbers of penguins were seen passing up the slippery walk or standing in groups in the entrance, where they were readily photographed. As the explorers passed up the street they found themselves immediately in a perfect maize. The grass rose high above their heads, touching at the top and forming arches. The streets at once led off in every direction, often bifurcating in a manner bewildering to the explorer. The avenues and lanes were packed with birds, the heat was intense, the odor overpowering, while the noise from ten thousand throats was like thunder.

The streets were the breeding grounds, and so closely placed were the nests and eggs that it was almost impossible to move without stepping upon them On each nest a sharp-peaked bird sat, its head drawn back, uttering in ferocious guttural "caa, caa, urr, urr," the peculiar sulphur-colored mustache vibrating with excitement. It was impossible to avoid them, and the sharp beaks soon began to tell on the legs of the intruders, and with effect so that the birds had to be unceremoniously tumbled aside with sticks and clubs. Fifty feet of this reduced the party to a condition that was described as maddening, the suffocating heat, the horrible uproar, the attacks from all sides rendering self-defence absolutely necessary, and the advance was continued over the bodies of the slain that were struck aside.

GULL.

beautiful creatures, with dark heads and bright, intelligent eyes; veritable spirits of the air and gale as they flitted about, while the noddies, which were sparsely represented, were dark, with a pale light patch upon the head. The gulls laid their eggs upon the ground, the noddies in rude nests upon the trees.

The island of key occupied several acres, perhaps twenty, and was covered with a low scrub of bay cedar, nowhere more than 10 feet in height, with here and there a patch of cactus or prickly pear. The beach was of pure white coral sand, 50 feet wide, so that the key seemed a gem of green in a white setting, resting on the deep blue water. The birds had congregated here for nesting purposes. Here the eggs were laid, an invisible source, and now floated over the spot. Poling the boat over the reef in that direction I soon solved the mystery. The cloud was alive, a mass of active fuss and feathers, birds, birds by the million, so it seemed. One or two came out to meet us, and now a distinct murmuring sound was heard, becoming louder and louder as we approached the island; the roar was deafening. The terns now left the island by scores and hundreds, flying about the boat with wild cries, darting down with menacing gesture.

Myriads that had been upon the ground rose, and what had been an indefinite cloud became an almost solid mass of birds, creating a noise like thunder, so that as our boat crunched on to the sandy beach, our voices were lost, and we could only hear each other by screaming. This had a singular effect, as on the second every individual ceased to chatter; silence profound seemed to reign, and the birds dived or swooped down as if in fear, to rise again and continue the avain uproar.

The sight was a most remarkable one. The birds were of two kinds—the blade-headed tern and the noddy—the former the young reared; upon which the myriads departed to scatter, possibly over thousands of miles of coast, until another year, when they instinctively sought out the isolated spot again to rear their young.

The birds had pre-empted every foot of the ground, so that it was difficult to step or move in the bush without treading upon the attractive speckled

BUILDING THE FAIR.

Busy Scenes at Jackson Park, the Site of the Columbian Exposition.

It takes a fence six miles long to enclose the world's fair buildings. All these structures are to be of extraordinary dimensions, but the largest of them, on which the foundation work has just been commenced, will be something stupendous. It is the hall of manufactures and liberal arts. The site for this vast building is a broad, highly situated plateau overlooking the lake. A railroad track runs through its center, and on each side rise tremendous piles of lumber, iron and all sorts of construction material.

A similar scene is witnessed at the other great buildings, on which further progress has been made. Within the enclosure the exposition site resembles one vast work-ground, surrounded by freight cars and lumber yards. Looking out towards the lake, the breakwater, the long pier and foundation for the naval exhibit present the appearance of a mammoth dockyard.

Changed, indeed, is Jackson park, and those who visited it three months ago would not know it now. A world's workshop, employing an army of builders, environed on three sides by the foliage and flowers of the south parks, and on the fourth by the infinite expanse of the lake.

The exposition site has undergone a wonderful change since last spring. Then it was a soft marshy ground shelving in irregular stretches to the water line. Now it is a firm level, a smooth sandy surface upon a clay subsoil. A perfect and admirably improved building site. The hundreds of visitors who view the grounds cannot immediately appreciate the immense difficulties that have been overcome and the great labor involved in the earthwork accomplished on this lake shore site. It is now a level surface to the line of the lake, a surface a mile and a half in length and, at its southern extremity, nearly a mile in width. This has been created, graded and leveled by constantly employing a small army of men and now, within the six miles of fence that surrounds it, the work of constructing the great buildings is being pushed with ceaseless activity.

From the slight eminence already known as "administration hill," which the lofty administration building is destined to effectively crown, the observer can even thus early gain a realistic sense of the distinctive features and general magnitude of this stupendous undertaking. At this point he is practically in the center of the sites alloted to the principal buildings and the system of terrace work which will surround them. He is also in the center of a complex network of railway track, 50,000 feet of it extending in every direction and connected with the trunk lines by fifty switches, all of them in constant use. This system of railway is laid upon what four months ago was wild park land untouched by the first improvement. The tracks are covered with cars, loaded with lumber, iron and every description of building materials. These roll into the grounds unceasingly and are switched up to the buildings to which the materials belong. Gangs of men take hold with a will and as if by magic towering piles of material rise in every section of the grounds. Mounted superintendents ride from point to point urging things forward. The word is "rush" in every department and branch of construction.

The big buildings are beginning to rise. Already some of the principal structures are not only in evidence, but progress on them is marked from day to day. Looking northwest from the administration building the visitor sees the womans' building, already so far advanced that it looms up imposingly against its background of park trees.

Rising in the vista are the Electricity and Mines and Mining buildings, on which the foundations are already completed. Upon the sites of the horticultural and transportation buildings all the preliminary work is completed, and hundreds of tons of material are ready to be placed in position.

Hundreds of men are engaged on every possible sort of construction work. Laying water-mains, electric-light plant, modeling for the exterior decorative work and developing landscape effects around ornamental waters.

A busy place indeed is the exposition ground, and soon it will be as busy by night as by day for the electric lighting necessary for night construction has just been arranged for.

From one end of the ground to the other everything is pushed, and that, too, in all sections of the work. In the landscape system, which includes the lagoons, basins and ornamental waters, the breakwater and lake shore terrace, the great pier and casino; in fact, all principal departments and even their minor divisions are being pressed forward with a business like ambition thoroughly in accordance with the impelling spirit of this gigantic enterprise.—Exchange.

A CORRECTION.

We announced that last week would close our Special Half Price to School Children, thinking that school opened this week.

As our original offer was during the school vacation, several of our friends have reminded us of our error, and we beg leave to correct it and to say that until the opening of the public schools, Monday morning, September, 7, our special $3 rate on best Cabinets will hold good. Please make appointments. Remember this is our BEST WORK.

THE WATERMELON.

How to Eat One, the Best Preparation Being to Steal It.

"What's the best way to eat a watermelon?" inquired a citizen.

"That depends," said another. "Henry Grady once gave his method, and it was a good one for eating melons honestly obtained, but if you want to eat a melon to get full flavor of it, imagine yourself a boy again, and, after sneaking into a patch, crawl over the field until you get the one you want and then get over the fence with it and sit down in a corner. Then break it open and eat while watching through the cracks of the fence for the owner of the patch. Grady's idea was to go out in the cool of the morning before the sun dried the dew, thump the melons till one gave back the proper sound, and then with a short-bladed knife give a rake all around it the long way. Throw away the knife and give the melon a whack on your knee. The melon parts and leaves all the heart on one half. Take that heart out with your fingers and eat it. But it can never taste as good as if stolen. Some people slice the melons the short way, and then put the slices on plates. To my mind that's a finniky way. The 'old-fashioned long slice is one of the best ways, after all."

"How can you tell a ripe melon by thumping in? They all thump alike to me." This from a young man, city raised.

"It's the easiest matter in the world," said a man who at some time of his life had risen with the lark and ploughed his task of furrows, "and any man who has ever lived on a farm will never make a mistake. You are right about the thumping sound being nearly the same always, and, unless a melon is real green, and an experienced eye can tell that without thumping it, there is but the very slightest difference in the sound, that is, apparently. But to the man of experience there is a big difference. I can tell exactly by a couple of thumps whether a melon is part ripe, a little under-ripe or a little over-ripe. But a better way for those who have not mastered the art of thumping is to scratch the rind the least bit. The rind of a ripe melon is tender and easily scratched, and turns dark immediately. The rind on a green melon is tough and requires several minutes to turn dark."

"Talking about melons, do you know that in a fire of last year came very near wiping out of existence the finest cantalope that was ever eaten in Macon?" said a man whose paunch showed plainly that along with his breakfast he had all the good things of life, including a cantalope. "You know that Bob Price first introduced a bluff-meated cantalope that was not only very sweet, but had an unusually thick rind and a very few seed. Everybody wanted a Bob Price cantalope, and he and Whit Hardy could have sold thousands had they raised them for the general market. By reason of their being almost seedless, it promised to be a long time before this cantalope could be generally raised, but Mr. Price managed, by close saving, to accumulate five pounds of seed. Then you know his home was destroyed by fire and with it the bag of seed. This season he borrowed a few of the seed from a friend to whom he gave some last season, and will raise about 100 cantalopes, when he expected to raise thousands."—Exchange.
